LOWER PRICE OF CORNHUSKERS

A reduction of the price of the 1924 Cornhusker has been announced by the business staff. This was made possible by the larger number of subscriptions sold this year, and also by lower rates that were secured for the contract work of the annual.

Very few businesses ever reduce the price of a commodity after sales have been made, and then make this reduction effective by a rebate. This is indeed a step forward and makes "The Cornhusker of Progress" a reality as well as a name, and the business management of the annual deserves a great deal of credit for making this reduction possible.

This reduction is all the more remarkable in view of the fact that the original price of $4.50 is a great deal lower than that of other yearbooks of large universities. The price of the Wisconsin Badger is $6.00, the Annapolis Lucky Bag, $7.00, the Minnesota Gopher, $5.00.

The Cornhusker will be a much larger book than that of last year. The pages are larger and the book will have 50 more pages this year, with larger departments and a more extensive art program.

This is not the first indication of the benefits to be derived from the University's new policy towards student publications—that of giving the students publications of the highest qualities for the lowest price. The 1924 Cornhusker will be as good as any in the country and at a much lower price.

The time when individuals were allowed to take University publications and exploit them for their own gain is past, with publications now assuming an attitude of service to the University and the student body and working towards our ultimate goal, a greater University of Nebraska.

CADET OFFICERS CONTRIBUTE.

One hundred dollars has been given to the Nebraska Memorial association stadium fund by the Cadet Officers club. This is a most worthy act, and all campus organizations having a surplus of funds could well follow the example of the military organization and contribute towards the stadium.

Now that the stadium is completed and we are using this splendid structure, many are too prone to forget that it is not yet paid for and that the pledges must be met promptly in order that the memorial association make good its obligations.

Organizations that have a surplus of funds could not find a better place to contribute than to the stadium fund. Students who do not meet their pledges promptly are holding up the work of those charged with the responsibility of meeting payments on the stadium.

THE DEMAND FOR SCHOOLS OF JOURNALISM (Indiana Daily Student)

Out of the University of Minnesota comes a plea such as was raised by journalism students of our own institution last spring, in an urgent request that the Gopher school establish a school of journalism. The same conditions prevail there as does here, that the journalism student can not obtain a degree in his chosen profession, although Indiana differs with Minnesota in the fact that it offers more of the opportunities of a school of journalism than does the Minnesota state school.

"The time has come when Minnesota will either fall into a Class C rating as a school offering journalism, an editorial in the Minnesota Daily declares, "or it will increase its staff and the number of courses

RAG CARPET Help! Help!

Tourist: My good man, why are you cutting down this tree? Lanky woodsman: Run out of toothpicks.

Teacher to class: Will you please consider art? Small voice: But I told him last night I'd never see him again.

First maid: How did you like working for that college professor? Second maid: Aw, he was all the time quarreling with his wife and they kept me busy running between the keyhole and the dictionary. — Punch Bowl.

The Rag Doll says that if lunch were served at the campus studio, perhaps the present noon hour patronage wouldn't register such a half-starved expression.

"Are you Incomplete?" "Goodness, did I forget my tie?"

A little bee sat on a tree And then he sat on me, o. g.—Yellow Jacket.

Frenzied roommate: Why are you hopping around the room for so? Dum thing: The prof told us to skip the first chapter.

it offers, and keep even with the pace being set by other colleges and universities." Arguments advanced in an other editorial are reprinted herewith in the "Other Editors Say" column. Many of the same facts apply here.

Indiana University, though, does not need to start at the bottom to give its students the proper journalism training. Already it has the beginnings of a great School of Journalism; it is proving the worth of its training by the records of its graduates and its increasing enrollment. Yet, the University does not give its students the greater prestige of a degree in the journalism profession, nor does it give them the opportunity of the all-round training that would be theirs were a School of Journalism a reality instead of the hope of every campus journalist and newspaper man of Indiana.

Engineers Society Will Make Awards

Through the generosity of a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, two funds of one thousand dollars each have been established, the income from which will be awarded annually for the best paper by a junior member of the Society and to the two enrolled student branch members who contribute the best papers. Papers must be submitted by June 30 for awards to be made at the annual meeting of the Society in December.

Competition is restricted to junior members and enrolled members of student branches in good standing. In the junior division the prize will consist of a cash amount, with an engraved certificate signed by the president and secretary of the Society; in the student division two prizes with similar engraved certificates will be given. Papers in both classes to be eligible for competition must have been produced by their authors without assistance, and must not have been previously contributed to nor published by any other society or technical publication.

Presentation before or publication by any of the student branches of the society, however, does not affect the eligibility of any student paper. Further information may be got from Prof. William L. DeBaufre, chairman of the department of mechanical engineering.

To stimulate advances in the mechanical engineering field the Society offers other prizes and awards, including honorary membership, life membership, medals for notable inventions, and diplomas of honorable mention for inventions or improvements.
