BASKET BALL TOURNAMENT

The state basket ball tournament will be held here March 6, 7, and 8. At that time more than two hundred and forty high schools will be represented by teams, and there will be between one thousand and fifteen hundred people in attendance from all over the state.

Many of these visitors are seniors in high school and a large percentage will go to some college or university next year. But many probably have no plans for after graduation from high school, either because they think that their finances will not permit it or because they have not the desire for higher education.

The University of Nebraska and everyone connected with it have a two-fold duty. The first is to "sell" the University and its advantages to every high school student, so that when they finish, they will want to come here to complete their education.

There is a place in this school for everyone, no matter what his financial condition may be. There are many ways that a student without means can earn enough to pay his expenses. Many Lincoln families are ready to offer a room to a student in return for work.

Every student should take it upon himself to see that every high school visitor be informed as to the advantages of our University. Every visitor should be acquainted with the situation regarding earning one's way.

It is a great opportunity for the University to display its wares to representatives of every city and hamlet in the state, and everything should be done to make the stay of the visitors pleasant and agreeable—so that they will leave Lincoln with a pleasant memory of the University and its students, and with a desire to come back at the first opportunity.

EMPLOYING COLLEGE PEOPLE

P. M. Cullough, '17, of the Northwestern Bell Telephone company of Omaha, visited the University Thursday to offer employment to engineering and business students. This demonstrates the foresight of some of the large corporations of the country.

The General Electric company and the Western Electric company and others, employ as many college graduates as possible. It has been proved that college graduates are more efficient employees, learn the details of their work far more readily, and become efficient faster than the persons who have not had the advantages of a college education.

What a fine thing it would be if more Nebraska concerns would look to the University for employees. Where is there a better field to find suitable employees?

It is the popular impression in some circles that the college man has the notion that upon graduation he will receive a position high up the ladder—but this is not true. Most college men realize that when they finish and get ready to begin work, they must start at the bottom like the person who has never attended a University. They understand this condition, but believe that they will be able to go up the ladder quicker. The college man bases his ambition on the fact that with the advantages of more training he will advance faster than the person who has not had this advantage.

It is surprising that more business men do not avail themselves of the opportunity to employ college men and women for about the same pay that they must give to the ordinary employee. They would receive the same amount of work and fill their positions with persons who would develop much faster and in a short time outstrip the average employee.

RAG CARPET

"What are you doing," quoth she as he took a flying six-foot leap over one of our street rivers.

"Celebrating leap year," he muttered grimly as he lit with a loud splash.

Alumni of the University would do well to consider University graduates for positions, and other Nebraska business men could get many employees from student of the University of Nebraska.

THINKS DEBATERS SHOULD GET "N"

The ambition of every man in school should be to get a letter in something or other, and to get a letter, at the present time, means to have athletic ability.

And so we should offer some field in which a man may make an N, even though he be physically disqualified. And that field would logically be debating. Men have to work hard, and train, and practically sweat blood to get their N on the athletic field, and that is one of the arguments for not giving a letter to men that debate.

That attitude should not be taken, however when we come to realize that instead of undergoing a strenuous physical exercise, they are stuck up in stuffy rooms, poring over strange works and digging out facts. Which prospect is more attractive? I think in nine cases out of ten, a man should rather go out and work hard on the athletic field than tax his brains for hours trying to perfect one little point in his argument.

I am sure that the men who have represented Nebraska on her debate teams in the past have been true representative Nebraskans, worthy of wearing our letter. They have gone out and fought and fought hard with other teams to uphold the honor of the institution, and yet all the credit they receive, is the paltry praise a line or two of print might give them.

If the "N" Club proposes to remain a representative group, it can only do so by adding debating to their lists. If we want men to keep as their main ambition throughout their school career—to make a letter—we want to offer them a way in which to make the letter, other than physical ability. The debaters of this school have a right to be honored, and this is the one appropriate way of doing so.

YOUTHFUL VIEWS (Daily Kansan)

It would probably be a dangerous world to live in, if the affairs of state and of business were in the hands of youth. Things might move at a terrific reckless speed.

With things as they are, youth sits back stretching its "leather neck" to see and hear all it can.

The old folks are doing fine. They have a prohibition law that is observed occasionally; two shameful scandals are in the process of development as a result of the political system; and the Ku Klux Klan is on hand to help save the nation.

The old folks are strangers to the political life of the nation. Perhaps the present mess will open at least one eye on something other than youth. Perhaps in the coming presidential election some of them will take the trouble to vote. Perhaps by the time youth grows up the world will have passed its state of chaos.

At present, while youth is being criticised, it is sitting back observing, laying the foundation for the structure in which it may save the world as a safe place for the old folks in their dotage.
