GEOGRAPHER TALKS AT LECTURE CLASS

The average of the worlds pre-war wheat crop, from 1909 to 1913 was 3,725,000,000 bushels. For the three years following the average fell to 2,850,000,000 bushels. In 1922 the average increased to 3,646,000,000 bushels. It is estimated that the 1923 average reached the pre-war figure, in spite of the fact that the wheat crop of Russia was 50 per cent deficient.

"Before the war the United States exported approximately 15 per cent of its wheat crop to Europe. During the height of the war exports amounted to 38 per cent. The figure has fallen to 20 per cent, and it is estimated that during the current year the pre-war figure will be reached," pointed out Professor Bengtson.

Increases and decreases in wheat exportations have affected wheat prices. According to the speaker, Europe, before the war, was able to buy and did buy. During the war food stuffs had to be imported. Since the war Europe cannot buy because of economic conditions. Consequently there is a surplus of American products. A surplus that cannot be disposed of tends to cause a fall in prices.

"The western lowlands of Europe, comprising the countries that are our best customers, are the greatest industrial section of the world. The population is dense and the mineral resources of coal and iron make them a great manufacturing center. All of the countries have large ocean ports, among the most famous being the harbor of Copenhagen. Many navigable rivers extend far inland and no city is more than 250 miles from tide water or a navigable stream.

"Coal is the great power factor of today for both steam and hydro-electric power," declared Professor Bengtson. "Germany and England have great coal fields that are being developed. France, England, Spain and Sweden have huge iron deposits that are being worked. England is the only country in Europe that has both iron and coal. The iron of France must go to the coal of Germany, and the metals of Spain and Sweden must also be shipped to the coal regions of other countries.

"Because the western lowlands of Europe are a great industrial section, they are a deficient agricultural section. Consequently they must import food stuffs. We ship them food, and they in turn send us their manufacturing products," explained Professor Bengtson.

"The American farmer, manufacturer and business man should take a great interest in the economic conditions of Europe," Professor Bengtson declared. "Good conditions there mean good markets for our surplus products, thereby creating better economic conditions at home."

KOSMET REHEARSALS OF ACT II TO BEGIN

Director Will Reduce Chorus to Forty Voices for Final Performance.

Rehearsals of Act II of the Kosmet Klub production, "The Wishing Ring," will be started this week under the direction of Cyril L. Coombs, author of the musical comedy. Act I has been rehearsed during the past two weeks.

The chorus has been reduced by Mr. Coombs and several other voices will probably be cut out this week. A chorus of forty voices will finally be selected for the play.

Members of the Kosmet Klub are enthusiastic over the prospects for a more successful production than ever before. The music, written especially for the comedy by Mr. Coombs, is proving a hit with the members of the cast. Eighteen songs will be included in the musical program. These include "The Wishing Ring," "Gypsy Moon," "Shadow Time," "In Spain," "When I Waltz with You," and the song which proved a hit at the Pan-Hellenic formal, "Hiding Away in Virginia."

Regular rehearsals will be held until April 25 when the play will be staged at the Orpheum theater. The production will probably then be taken to Omaha for presentation as was done last year.
