MISSOURI VALLEY TRACK.

The new Cornhusker cinder path in the stadium is almost ready for the Scarlet and Cream athletes. When it is finished, Nebraska will have one of the finest, if not the finest, of quarter-mile cinder tracks in America. Saturday, when tryouts for the Kansas relays are held, the formal opening of the track will take place.

For the first time in the history of the Cornhusker institution, Nebraska's tracksters, valley champions for the past three years, will have an adequate place to train and work-out.

Enthusiasm over the new track has filled Coach Schulte and his proteges with ambition and optimism in the coming outdoor track season. The Huskers are working hard, drilling and grinding in preparation for Nebraska's greatest track season. The Huskers are out to win first honors in the valley, and the record-breaking performances seen almost daily in the Husker camp are but a small indication of what is yet to come from Nebraska's track men.

The interfraternity track meet, in which 350 Huskers took part, gave evidence of the great possibilities which our University has in track. Capable men in every event were "discovered" by Coach Schulte, and asked to report regularly. Among the men of the school a new interest in track, the international sport, was developed.

Nebraska will be host to the valley in the first athletic conference meet ever held at the Cornhusker school. Nebraska will have two great opportunities; first, to win the Valley championship for the fourth consecutive year, and second, to demonstrate their ability to be hosts to the rest of the valley.

The Cornhusker track team is going to realize on the first of these opportunities by going out to win the valley title. They are going to do their part. The question still remains as to whether or not Nebraska as an institution will prove equal to the occasion, whether Nebraska will be as good a host as it is a developer of athletic teams. If Nebraska is to be successful as the host of the valley on that day, every courtesy to the visitors must be extended, and the great stands of the memorial stadium must be filled to capacity with fans in order that the expenses of the meet may be paid.

Nebraska must make good in the eyes of the valley, and the success of this track program calls for the unqualified support of every loyal Cornhusker.

A QUESTION OF PRINCIPLE.

"M. P. B." and "J. D. P." seem to have missed the real point in the Daily Nebraskan editorial on the affair at Northwestern. The editorial was not a defense of pacifism or of the principles which lead the students to sign the non-resistance pledge. Discussion of the merits of the controversy is beside the point.

The issue at Northwestern was a clean cut one of free thought. It was a question of whether or not the students were right or wrong. It was a question of whether or not the students were to think for themselves or were to allow the president and the board of trustees to think for them.

The student at Northwestern was dismissed because he insisted on thinking for himself. The practice which President Scott followed has dangerous possibilities. If it is pos-

A COURSE IN SPEAKING.

(Penn State Collegian)
There is a dearth of men in this college who possess the courage to take the floor and address their fellow students. Undergraduate government bodies, campus societies, fraternities and clubs are alike in one respect the majority of their members are content to sit back and a few men to conduct the business of the organization.

Yet, quite often those students who are most reticent, have excellent ideas on the solution of the various questions that come up for discussion. No sooner is the meeting adjourned, however, than these "after-meeting" speakers are airing their views in no uncertain tones. How much better would it be if they would present their suggestions to the meeting instead of holding post-mortems on action that has been taken.

The ability to talk in a convincing and logical manner is a characteristic that the majority of students who are leaders in the activities of the college, possess. Certainly then, this is one of the essential ingredients of success, not only in college but also in the business and industrial world. Unfortunately, the average graduate finds that opportunities to develop this asset are comparatively few outside of college.

"Become a leader by developing your power to address men in a forceful and convincing manner!" Here is advice that has all the earmarks of a correspondence school advertisement, but in reality, it can be applied to a course in public speaking that is offered by every student organization of this college.

When compared with the curriculum work listed in the college catalog, the course is an attractive one. There are no examinations, no regular assignments, and no faculty task-makers. Classes are held whenever undergraduates gather together in meetings. A perfect recitation is made by merely getting on one's feet and entering into discussions.

sible to dismiss a student for being an extreme pacifist it is just as possible to dismiss student for being the single tax, socialism, evolution or any one of a dozen theories which are not generally accepted by University presidents and boards of trustees.

The independence of the individual mind and conscience is one of the cardinal principles of our government. "M. P. B." and "J. D. P." speak of "loyalty." There can be no finer loyalty than an insistence upon the preservation of this American principle of the free mind and the free conscience. H. B. C.

Student Opinion.

THINKS EDDY GOT OFF THE SUBJECT.

To the Editor:

"Campus Problems" was the subject that Sherwood Eddy was supposed to talk on at the Thursday morning meeting. I went to that meeting. I expected to hear Mr. Eddy talk on problems that exist at every state university. But he didn't.

He talked on morality. That was all right. It doubtless did most of us some good. Most every group of people can always stand a talk on morality. I am not disputing that it wasn't good, but what truck me was that Mr. Eddy should select such a subject for his lecture.

Morality is not the most important campus problem, not by a whole lot. A very small percentage of University students are immoral. I do not maintain that immorality does not exist, but I do believe that a much smaller percentage of students are immoral than a similar group of people of the same age.

Morality may be one of the problems, but there are many more that are much more important. I was disappointed. I wanted to hear a discussion of the subject that was advertised, for it should be interesting. M. C. B.

It is a wise undergraduate who takes advantage of this extra-curriculum course. He will find that the ability to express his ideas confidently and forcefully will be no small part of the assets that he has derived from his college education.
