WHAT WE NEED.

The University building program has not kept pace with the increase in registration. The same buildings that were here when the enrollment was about half as large as at present are still doing service, and the University authorities have squeezed the additional students into the quarters that were none too large for a much smaller number.

One of the outstanding needs of the University is a new library, large enough and with accommodations adequate to care for student and faculty members. The present structure is much too small and out-of-date for an institution as large as this.

Our museum is about half as large as it should be to properly display the collection, which is one of the best in the world.

The College of Dentistry is housed in an old, tumbling building down town, and lacks many modern conveniences that are considered a necessity by the average dental college.

The gymnasium is located in the old armory, and it is much too small. A modern gymnasium is something that the University needs to properly care for the students.

And so it goes. We could go on down the line and think of many other things that are needed by the University of Nebraska. And perhaps if we are patient and bide our time, we will eventually get them.

VACATION.

Only a few weeks of school are left, and students will soon be leaving for their homes. Three months intervene before return to the campus.

The seniors go with perhaps a slightly different viewpoint than underclassmen. They leave the scenes where they spent four of the best years of their lives, and face the trials and tribulations of a new environment and new problems. They are thrown upon their own resources and settle into the path that they will probably travel for many years.

The undergraduates go, for the most part, free from care and worry. Vacation to them is merely a short three months in which to play, to work, to rest, or to do whatever else their respective tastes or needs direct. They look forward to the return to school.

All should have some objective, something to look forward to. The graduates are forced to make plans for the future and the undergraduate should do the same thing before the approach of necessity compels it.

This is the only way that any one can get the best out of the four years spent here. Work for the future.

GRADUATING IN STADIUMS.

(Indiana Daily Student)
 A new use has been found for the great stadiums that have sprung up in college towns over the country during the last few years. Authorities at the University of California have decided to hold commencement exercises this spring in their athletic bowl, in order to accommodate the vast throng that is expected to be present when the 2400 seniors receive their sheepskins and the customary words of advice before taking their plunge into a life profession. "Special provisions for voice amplification" have been promised, according to the Daily Californian.

The proposal of the Western school certainly presents an innovation in the staging of senior ceremonies. Whether or not the idea will prove practical and sufficient provision can be made so that speakers may be heard by all spectators, remains to be seen. Certainly it is, however, that some such step is jus-

TO MAKE VACATION MONEY.

1. Start a correspondence school

on "How to Make Money—Nineteen Easy Lessons"
 2. Hire a counterfeiter's outfit.
 3. Sell life insurance to oldest inhabitants, human flies and the skyscrapers union.
 4. Take pages 13, 33 and 93 out of all the modern novels and publish a book of your own. Have the cook revise it and send it in as a scenario.
 5. There are lots more way, but we have to leave as the bill collector is coming.

THE MAID WAS OUT.

tified at an institution of the size of the University of California. The hot seasonal temperature that usually features commencement would be especially noticeable in the Pacific coast state, and would make holding the ceremonies indoor practically impossible.

With the crowd of students, faculty members and alumni that witness the senior exercises annually growing larger, the matter of providing ample seating facilities is becoming a real problem at many of the country schools. The outdoor amphitheater on our campus has reached the point where it will barely accommodate the commencement day crowd. If the Western plan proves feasible, it may be a matter of but a few years until Indiana, as well as other educational institutions, will be bidding God-speed to her graduates from a strip of greensward in the sunlight, surrounded by the sloping bleachers packed with graduation "fans."

To you capitalists—the class of '24

Your college training is in truth a capital. Its value is not fixed, but depends on the way you invest it. Some men demand a quick return—a high percentage of profit. Others look more to the solidity of the investment.

The man of speculative mind may stake all on the lure of a high starting salary, without a thought to the company which gives it or where this may lead him in ten years. True, his opportunism may reap exceptional profit; or else a loss.

The man who knows that great things develop slowly will be content with six months' progress in six months' time—provided he is investing that time in a company which offers him a future.

You who are about to invest, satisfy yourself that the security you are getting is gilt-edged.
