

NEBRASKANS ARE WINNING RIFLERS

Treadwell and Foss of Seventh Corps Teams Return From Camp Perry.

The Seventh Corps Area rifle team competing with teams from the other eight corps areas, was leading by ten points when Paul Treadwell, '26, and Victor Foss, '26, Lincoln, returned from Camp Perry, Ohio, where they represented Nebraska on the winning team of the Seventh Corps Area in the National Rifle matches.

Treadwell and Foss won their places on the team when they turned in the highest scores in the Nebraska camp at Fort Snelling this summer, and placed among the first of the entire camp. Three other Nebraska men, Emmett Maun, Charles Caldwell, and Leo Rosenberg, qualified for places on that team, but were unable to attend the meet at Camp Perry.

The Cornhusker's representative last year, Charles Horth, was the coach of the Seventh Corps Area team this year.

CALIFORNIA—The charter of the University of California chapter of Alpha Beta Phi was revoked by the university authorities. Charges of drunkenness resulting in the death by accident of the fraternity president were brought. DeWitt Hillebrand of the University had warned the fraternity numerous times before the last and more serious offense.

The College Press

The average college student has been weighed in the balance and found wanting. The editor of the Occident, which has been "sailing beyond the sunset" for lo these many years, has devoted considerable attention to him and in today's issue has flattered the subject with several galleys of type.

Taking into consideration heredity and environment,—all the forces of sociology, religion, politics, marriage, Americanism, professors and their variations,—the editorial diagnoses the lamentable case of the average student in a way only comparable to the work of the alienists in the Loeb-Leopold case.

And the verdict is "Guilty!"—guilty—of—... preferring always those ideas and ideals which have been properly tested by time, the Bible, or American traditions (if there are any), and entered as facts of life into the great gospel of social expediency.

What ideals he should accept are not suggested.

Also, the diagnosis omits one of the outstanding characteristics of this horrible specimen, the average student,—his insistence on the fact that he is not average. Even the scourge of our educational system may go through the ritual of his kind in criticizing all the established because it is established; he may fall on his face before any new God he happens to meet because such are undoubtedly the most sensational, the most gaudy.

The average college student may be all the Occident says he is. There is an equal bet on the side that he is not. At any rate, the super-average defeat their own liberal philosophy by becoming distinctly intolerant of intolerance.

They might take a hint from one they admire, Havelock Ellis:

"The diversity of the world therefore is natural. Yet no less natural is this inability to accept its own diversity. It is by limitation,—the limitative which all art involves,—that Nature becomes diverse, fantastic, seemingly artificial. It is by that same limitation that these diverse forms cannot accept each other. I recall the critical, disdainful gaze of a small terrier as he stood still to watch a great goose pass by."

And whether we are terriers or geese—super-average or average—we can do no good in attacking something as intangible as the sin of being one of the mob. "Let us therefore" with Mr. Ellis, "accept with joy the diversity of the world and with equal joy its inability to accept its own diversity. For that also is delightful."—The Daily Californian.

TWO RATTLESNAKES TAKE LUIS' PLACE

Luis, the boa-constrictor, is a thing of the past. Today, however, the Zoological Department visitors again cluster around the cage in Bessey Hall 101 where once Luis held sway. Again the object or objects of interest belong to the snake family but now South America has given way to North America for the inmates of the cage are two American rattlesnakes.

The younger rattlesnake, born this summer, has prepared for winter and has put on a new coat and has thrown the old coat on the bottom of the cage where it lies unmolested. With the shedding of this coat the younger snake acquired a new black rattle.

Evidently these snakes feel perfectly at home or at least have a good appetite, in direct contrast to Luis, for last Saturday two mice were dropped into the cage and speedily devoured.

At first inspection these two snakes, lying coiled in the cage, seem harmless, but when they are aroused and start to use their rattles people who know rattlesnakes instinctively step back before they remember the screen that guards the reptiles.
