

NOTED EDITOR MAKES SPEECH

Dr. Oswald G. Villard Gives Address to Students of Journalism.

SPEAKER INTRODUCED BY PROF. M. M. FOGG

Dr. Oswald Garrison Villard of New York City, editor of The Nation, addressed a convocation of the School of Journalism upon the subject, "Journalism and Politics," at the Temple Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock.

The importance of a free and impartial newspaper in politics was emphasized by Dr. Villard in the opening of his address.

"We live in a republic and we have been told that an enlightened public opinion is necessary if that form of government is to live," he declared.

The growing tendency toward consolidation of newspapers was pointed out by Dr. Villard as another tendency that threatened to do away with the free and unprejudiced journal.

"The newspapers of today have become great business enterprises," stated Dr. Villard. "The manager has lost touch with the common people, has no basis for understanding their ambitions and their aspirations."

"The indictment I have against the newspaper is that so many of the editorial writers are ignorant and ill informed. The great editor has disappeared. The great newspapers no longer want a personality to mould the opinion of their readers."

"We have a serious situation here in the United States. We have come to a parting of the ways politically. The protest we see in the form of a third party is a protest by the masses against the failure to develop a progressive movement in any party. It arises from a feeling of the mass of the people that they are not represented in politics and the press."

Dr. Villard's family has been in journalism 106 years—longer than any other American family except the Bowes of the Springfield, Mass., Republican. His grandfather, William Lloyd Garrison, the abolitionist, whom a broadcloth mob dragged on a rope through the streets of Boston, began as a printer in 1819 and later started the "Liberator," an abolitionist journal.

OREGON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE—Charles T. Wrightson, a freshman, has introduced a novel method of earning his way through college. He has brought his airplane to college and plans to take up passengers during his spare time to pay expenses.

Eagle Chief and Francis Come to Study at University of Nebraska

By Volta Torrey.

Eagle Chief, a Winnebago Indian, packed up his war bonnet, flute, porrage bags and other family heirlooms, then threw in a football suit and some "white men's" clothes, and came to the University of Nebraska this fall. He met Francis, a Pottawatomie from Mayetka, Kansas, who had also come in quest of knowledge, the two now room together at the Y. M. C. A.

Eagle Chief is majoring in physical education and is out for both freshman football and the cross country. Francis is registered in the College of Business Administration.

The majority of the Indians were very loyal during the war, according to these two spokesmen, and when one of the Winnebago braves sent home the scalp of a German, the old tribesmen hung it on a pole and did the "Buffalo" dance around it in the manner of their great grandfathers for three nights.

"Religion plays an important part in the Indian's life," Eagle Chief continued. "In the Winnebago tribe there are two groups, the Medicine Lodge and Peyote, which differ much the same as Catholics and Protestants."

They have a much more optimistic manner of paying tribute to the dead than we have. When an Indian dies, instead of wearing long faces and mourning costumes, his friends adorn themselves in their best bib and tucker and give a big party that continues for three nights. If the Great Spirit calls before sunrise the festivities begin at once, but if death occurs during the day, the celebration is delayed until dark. The object of the feasting and merry-making is to cause the mourners to forget their loss and rejoice that their loved one has gone on to the Happy Hunting Ground where all good Indians go.

The flute that Eagle Chief has brought with him seems to be a connecting link between the present and the lives of his ancestors. It is a birchwood stick, burned out hollow, with holes carefully burned in, rather than drilled or cut. Deeper even than the holes, the spirit and soul of the old Indian who made it is burned into that birchwood stick. With it, the Winnebago can bring back all the joys and sorrows of his forefathers, all the weird sounds of the plains and streams, all the grief of the first Americans for the loss of their country.

In Eagle Chief's trunk are so many things worth telling about that one scarcely knows where to begin—a mammoth wig of long, black hair that would make the owner of the most perfect bob hang her head in shame, a beaded vest that rivals a medieval coat of armor for weight, fancy cuffs to match, a tobacco pouch almost two feet deep from which the tribal peace pipe has often been filled, necklaces of great value, fancy belts, and many other products of skilled old brown hands.

But the gayest of the gay are the leg bands. They are beaded straps about two inches wide that go around the leg just below the knee. Long yellow threads hang from behind them. Truly, they would give a runner the appearance of being carried on golden wings.

CANDY IS SPEAKER AT LECTURE CLASS

Explains College of Arts and Sciences to New Students.

"The College of Arts and Sciences" was the subject of the lecture given by Prof. A. L. Candy, chairman of the mathematics department and acting dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, at the weekly freshman lecture classes Monday evening and Tuesday morning. It was the second of a series of lectures given first-year students in the Arts College.

"Of the ten colleges at the University of Nebraska, the College of Arts and Sciences is the largest in point of enrollment. Yet we must consider that these ten colleges are really not separate institutions, for students in the Colleges of Law, Engineering, Business Administration, and practically all others have courses in the Arts college."

Professor Candy pointed out the difference between the larger universities of foreign countries and those of the United States. "While our universities are institutions of man different colleges," he said, the larger colleges of foreign countries are not. Oxford and Cambridge in England are both Colleges of Arts and Sciences, while the trend in larger German universities is toward graduate colleges alone."

The first colleges of higher learning contained but three courses, according to Professor Candy. These were grammar, logic and rhetoric. Later, between the tenth and thirteenth centuries four more were added—music, arithmetic, geometry, and astronomy. An education along these lines was called a "liberal arts education" and learning along professional lines was a "professional education."

"It is now the purpose of the College of Arts and Sciences to give training for the professions in addition to the liberal arts, so the Arts college is the foundation upon which the University rests and a very high standard of instruction must be maintained."

Professor Candy explained the four fundamental departments of the College as being the natural and physical sciences, the social sciences, mathematics and philosophy, and the languages. In closing he stated that culture should be derived from a liberal arts education and that culture in a broad sense is "knowing the best things ever said and done in the world."

TO START SALE OF LUNCHEON TICKETS

Tassels Sponsor Annual Event For All University Women.

The ticket sale for the women's Cornhusker Luncheon, October 18, in the Armory will start Thursday, October 9, under the auspices of the Tassels, girl's "pep" organization.

Receive Many Applications for Work on 1925 Cornhusker.

The 1925 Cornhusker business staff will be announced in The Daily Nebraskan Sunday. There have been several applications. Students were selected on the basis of previous experience, ability, and the amount of time they can give to the work.

An extensive advertising campaign will be launched within a few days. The campaign is starting early this year because more advertising must be sold than ever before to defray the increased expense of the book.

Team to Leave For Oklahoma Tomorrow

The football team leaves for Norman at 1:45 Thursday noon. Although no formal rally has been planned, "Duke" Gleason, cheerleader, has expressed a hope that a large number of students will gather at the Temple and march to the station to see the football men off. There will be cheering and an impromptu encouragement for the team.

PLAN ALL-SISTER PARTY

Tickets Remain on Sale Until Wednesday Evening.

The All-Sister dinner and party will be held at 5 o'clock in the Armory Thursday. Freshmen may obtain tickets from Miss Cook in Ellen Smith Hall. Tickets will remain on sale until Wednesday evening.

The party will be one of the largest of the year and should provide an opportunity for all "sisters" to become better acquainted. Music and dancing will follow the dinner.

GIVE PICNIC FOR WOMEN STUDENTS

Expect 500 to Attend Annual Outing at Auto Club Park.

The annual picnic for freshmen and other new women students is to be given by the Women's Athletic Association Saturday, October 11, at Auto Club park. Any woman in the University who has never been registered here before, whether she be a freshman or not, is invited to attend.

Trucks will be at the Armory at 4 o'clock to take the guests to the park. Every member of the organization is urged to be there with a new student.

Rosalie Platner, who is in charge of the picnic, is planning the entertainment and will see to it that there will be plenty to eat. There will be a big camp fire and a camp supper. Everything will be free.

Those who wish to come are urged to leave their names in the box in the west entrance of the Armory as soon as possible.

The membership work of the Y. W. C. A., now being carried on by the freshman membership committee, will culminate in a candle-lighting service, October 21. The candle-lighting service is an annual event and at this time every new member takes her pledge as the other members renew theirs.

Any woman who cares to sign the membership card may become a member of the University Y. W. C. A. At this time all who not previously done so are given an opportunity to join, and any woman not reached through the committee will find cards on the tables at Ellen Smith Hall.

AG Y.W.C.A. HAS MEETING

Dean Amanda Heppner Speaks On the Subject of "Dreams."

Dean Amanda Heppner spoke on "Dreams" at the meetings held by the College of Agriculture Y. W. C. A. at 12:30 Tuesday. The Y. W. C. A. organization was explained to freshman women and cards were given out for those who wished to join.

"The dreamer is one who has ideals and who does things which improve the condition of the world, whatever his vocation may be," said Miss Heppner. She then went on to tell of the play, "The Wonderful Visit," in which a vicar dreams that an angel returns to earth and is scarcely welcomed. He returns to heaven but before he leaves the vicar asks him if there is any hope for the world and the angel replies that as long as there are dreamers the world is safe.

ELECTION VOTE IS VERY HEAVY

Race for Honorary Colonel Is Decided by Plurality of Six Votes.

INTEREST IN OUTCOME IS KEENEST IN YEARS

Over 2500 votes, twice as many as last year, were cast and interest in the first semester elections yesterday was keener than it has been for several years. Dorothy Brown, '26, Gothenburg, Delta Gamma, won out in the race for honorary colonel by a margin of six votes.

The plan of electing the honorary colonel before the selection of the colonel by the military department seemed to add much interest to the election.

DELEGATES REPORT Y. W. CONVENTION

Annual Conference Held at Estes Park Told of At Vespers.

Reports of the annual Y. W. C. A. conference at Estes Park were given by delegate who attended the convention at the Vesper services at 5 o'clock Tuesday evening at Ellen Smith Hall. Miss Betty Raymond presided over the services. Betty Luce played a violin solo.

Miss Agnes Kessler, president of the University Y. W. C. A., explained the general purpose and the plan of the conference. Following Miss Kessler's preliminary remarks, Freda Barker told of the Bible study classes, their organization and method of study. These classes were under the general supervision of Dr. Bruce Curry, who conducted Bible study classes on this campus last year.

The inter-racial problem as discussed at the conference was outlined by Elsie Gramlich. Negro girls took part in these discussions. Hikes, horseback riding, and drives to points of scenic interest were some of the favored forms of recreation at the camp, according to Cyrena Smith who spoke on this subject.

Miss Appleby described the excitement that was aroused when the church committee voted that, if they were to suggest a change for the better in modern church organization, they would have churches adopt the pacifist attitude.

Any girl who is interested is allowed to attend these conventions. The nine Nebraska delegates this year were: Agnes Kessler, '26, Beatrice; Grace Spacht, '25, Alliance; Freda Barker, '25, Hot Springs, S. D.; Cyrena Smith, '27, Phillipsburg, Kansas; Elsie Gramlich, '26, Fort Crook; Margaret William, '25, Lincoln; Ethelwyn Gulick, '25, Goodland, Kansas; Kathryn Krieg, '26, Omaha; and Miss Erma Appleby, secretary of the Y.
