

University Student Writes of Experiences In Central America

Co-incident with Homecoming day comes a letter from a former Nebraska student in Guatemala City, Guatemala, Central America. John C. Shepard, a junior in the College of Business Administration last year, is the writer. Mr. Shepard left Lincoln last spring for Puerto Barrios, Guatemala, but ill health caused him to move to Guatemala City, where he became connected with Empresa Electrica, of Guatemala. He will return to the University next year, he writes. The letter dated October 3, follows: Office of The Daily Nebraskan, University of Nebraska, Lincoln, Nebraska.

Dear Friends: Last May I left Lincoln and sailed from New Orleans to Puerto Barrios, Guatemala; yet within another year I shall be back at Uni once more. I wish I could see the football games this fall.

Some said it was only the lure of the tropics that was taking me to a tropical country. Possibly it was the 'lure'—but I little realized just what the lure would be. As it is expressed here—the lure of the tropics: forty-seven different odors, each one separate and very distinctive. My trip through the South and on the sea was wonderful with the exception of our last day on the water, when we ran into a water-spout which rather upset things on the steamer, including our appetites. I was very fortunate in securing two very good time-exposure pictures of the storm.

When we landed I found myself in a little town of about three thousand Indians and negroes. The streets were only paths, with the exception of a gravel walk which extended about two blocks. Sanitation was unheard of, and the only amusement was tennis; but as it rained every day and every night, that amusement was out of the question. It was nothing but a frontier life for me and that did not agree. I spent a little better than half of my first three months in the hospital with the malaria and complications. I do not think anything can run down any one's health quicker than the tropics and malaria. Finding that climate would not agree with me I came to Guatemala City, which is about fifty miles from the Pacific coast.

We are at an altitude of 5,000 feet and at the end of my first four weeks here I felt as good as ever. It is a wonderful climate and will do anyone good. At present it is so cool at night that one must wear a light top-coat. Our summer begins in February. In my short stay here I have been in practically all parts of Guatemala. In the center of this country is nothing but desert and cactus much like Arizona. The heat on this desert is terrible and as the fisherman said of the whale, "she blows and blows and blows."

The distance from Puerto Barrios to Guatemala City is 200 miles and it takes twelve hours of steady traveling on the small three-quarter gauge railways here. These trains are much the same as our street cars in Lincoln and are not any too comfortable to take a long ride upon.

Looking back to my first few days in this city, I see myself walking the streets with a Spanish dictionary and trying to think of some plausible manner in which I could inquire where some building was, or what I could order for my next meal. It wasn't funny then, but now that I am where only Spanish is spoken, and few Americans seen, I am rapidly improving in this language.

The financiers have gone to Spain for the famous bulls which will be used in the great arena bull fight the first of December. The matadors everyone goes to these fights. About are the idols of the people here and five bulls and horses are killed in one afternoon.

I would greatly appreciate hearing from all of my old friends in University.

PROCLAIMS EDUCATION WEEK

Governor Bryan Urges Observance During November.

A boost for "American education week" during the month of November, has been given by the following proclamation which Governor Bryan issued Thursday:

"Every American citizen who feels the responsibility of his citizenship has already realized the importance of the education of American children. However, it is not easy to choose in a system where many theories are offered one, the exact plan by which to train our children to become honest, intelligent, valuable members of society; to give the right instruction in ethics which is so greatly needed in our complex, modern world, and to develop fine character, while at the same time producing alert intelligence is a task worthy of our most serious attention and most careful study.

"Therefore, in order to encourage public consideration of these matters, and to encourage the working out and adoption of a system that will give to every American boy and girl equality of opportunity in education, I, Charles W. Bryan, governor of the state of Nebraska, hereby designate the week of November 17 to November 23, 1924, inclusive, as American education week, and recommend that the program as already planned, namely: Monday, Constitution day; Tuesday, Patriotism day; Wednesday, School and Teacher day; Thursday, Illiteracy day; Friday, Physical Education day; Saturday, Community day; and Sunday, For God and Country day, be followed wherever possible and that the schools, churches and various civic organizations of the state co-operate in making the observance of the week a success."

A new system of having the first-year students in the College of Law report with their case notebook from time to time for advice and conferences has been put into effect this year. This system serves as a check from day to day on just what the students are doing.

One, comfort. The sportsman, the well-dressed man, does not enjoy ordinary collar-attached shirts, because, while comfortable, they are messy in appearance. Two, smartness. Superb fabric and tailoring added to the Van Heusen Collar make, at last, the ideal negligee shirt. No bands or seams in the collar to irritate the neck. No fear of wilting even in hottest weather.
