THE HIGH SPOT
Missouri and Drake are the only undefeated Missouri Valley teams.

BE A HOST
A thousand Nebraskans' fathers are coming to the campus tomorrow to be with their sons for a day, and to become acquainted with the University.

EXPECTING TOO MUCH
The contrast Nebraska students have made of this week in paying their stadium pledges with the week when student athletic tickets went on sale, is ludicrous.

Ten Years Ago
The University Removal Question was to be decided. Every student was urged to go to the polls and fill out a blank either for campus expansion or removal.

USELESS POLITICS
An inquiring reporter of the University Daily Kansan asked "What do you think of Hill politics?"

Hospitality is due the "dads" tomorrow. Their sons will greet them with that spirit at heart, but it is more difficult to show filial affection than to feel it.

The tendency to disguise feeling, to stifle emotion, must be overcome in some degree tomorrow if every father is to feel that he has been welcomed by his son, and that the day has been a happy one for both.

The contrast Nebraska students have made of this week in paying their stadium pledges with the week when student athletic tickets went on sale, is ludicrous.

When the athletic tickets went on sale something was being given to the students. The return is large, in admission to football, basketball and baseball games and wrestling and track meets, for the price of the ticket. Naturally, demand was brisk.

When the booth for payments on stadium pledges was placed, the students had an opportunity to help pay for the stadium in which they had just secured seats for the football season. But there was no tangible, direct return offered for the money requested, and demand, naturally again, was far from brisk.

Those in charge of collecting pledges for the erection of the stadium are evidently a few hundred years ahead of the times. They are expecting too much from Nebraska students if they expect them to keep idle promises of this nature.

But the underlying uselessness of campus politics showed through two of the answers. One man said that the platforms of the two parties were so much alike he could not tell them apart. One woman said that "a bad point" of campus politics, although she approved of them, was that the candidates made many new acquaintances before the election but didn't know them afterward.

In two sentences every justification for the institution of "Hill politics" at Kansas, and therefore of campus politics at every university, is swept away. There is no issue upon which a logical party division can be made. The acquaintances made during the campaign are forgotten after the election.

The plan of having every student and faculty member read proof on his own name in the new directory is unusual, but excellent. Everyone has the chance to have exactly correct his name, address, telephone number and all other information that appears in the book. Numerous errors have made directories for a number of years so un dependable as to be almost useless.

KANSAS FIGHTS

Few had cause for regret after the game Saturday. Each one of that throng which witnessed the game felt satisfied that Kansas had fully as good a team as Nebraska, but that the fateful breaks, coming at opportune moments, paved the way to a Husker victory.

If ever a team looked glorious in defeat, it was Kansas at the Homecoming game. The fury of its attack, the dash and fight of the players, swept the Nebraskans off their feet in the first half. The northern invaders, flushed after an overwhelming victory over a powerful Eastern eleven, came to Lawrence with a full confidence that they could safely dispose of the Jayhawk with a few well-aimed blows.

But what did the Cornhuskers find? They ran up against a team which had previously decided that it would not be beaten. For more than half of the contest it looked as though this decision would be borne out and the Nebraskans were bewildered by the fury and versatility of the Crimson and Blue attack.

Then came the fateful third quarter. One of the inevitable breaks of football games gave the ball to the Huskers in a position where there was little or no chance of stopping them. Robertson raced 30 yards over the Kansas goal line for a touchdown. The Nebraska rooters went wild while the Kansas team lined up for the kickoff.

The touchdown proved to be the margin of victory as the final score showed. Another touchdown and goal by the Huskers and a single touchdown and goal by Kansas gave the Nebraskans the edge. Again Kansas lost by a break. Fighting against time the Jayhawks tried pass after pass. Many of them were good, many of them were grounded.

Kansas played harder than she has played for some time and the results were evident. Illinois was taxed to the limit to defeat the Huskers and even the wily Red Grange was unable to cut through for substantial gains. The Sooners defeated them in a game played in sweltering heat. That a green team should show the fight and results that Kansas showed in the Homecoming game was nothing short of remarkable.

The Jayhawk isn't through by a long way. There are several games left this season and the brand of football played Saturday will turn them into victories.—From the University Daily Kansan for Tuesday, October 28.

Twenty Years Ago

Plans were made for the organization of a women's rooting squad to be present at all games. Steps were taken for its permanent establishment on the campus.

The botany department had just received from England two "Sunshine recorders" for use in the ecology classes. They made an automatic record of the daily amount and intensity of the sunshine which plants receive.

Busts of Roosevelt and Parker were given to the members of the Republican and Democratic clubs.

Ten Years Ago

The University Removal Question was to be decided. Every student was urged to go to the polls and fill out a blank either for campus expansion or removal.

The third number of the "Aw-gwan," the Prof's Number, was published. On the cover was an excellent cartoon of Dean Engberg with the label, "The Campus Kaiser."

The Cornhuskers were victorious by a 20-to-7 margin with Ames, in which the Aggies led 7 to 3 up to the final period. Captain Halligan made two successful place-kicks in the last quarter when the Nebraskans had reached their regular stride.
