

WILL GRANT NO EXCUSES

Students Going to South Bend Must Not Miss Classes.

SPECIAL TRAIN LEAVES ON FRIDAY AFTERNOON

No students will be granted excuses from classes next week in order to drive to Notre Dame. That is the statement made late yesterday by Carl C. Engberg, executive dean. The ruling, he said, was made necessary by the mid-semester examinations which will be given in most classes next week.

This means that students who wish to attend the Notre Dame game must make their reservations on the Cornhusker special train which will leave Lincoln at 4:30 o'clock Friday afternoon, November 14. The train arrives in South Bend in time for the game Saturday and leaves there that day, arriving at Lincoln Sunday.

The train already has an assured number of passengers which will total more than two hundred and fifty. Accommodations for as many as wish to go can be made at the Burlington railroad office. The band will accompany the rooters and the train will be decorated for Nebraska.

FINISH PLANS FOR CARNIVAL

Committee of Scabbard and Blade Completes Plans for Military Fete.

COWBOY COSTUME TO BE STYLE FOR PARTY

Hundreds of students are expected to attend the annual Military Carnival at the Armory tomorrow evening. Roland Eastabrooks, chairman of the committee of Scabbard and Blade, military organization sponsoring the carnival, says that the affair will be one of the most popular of All-University parties.

The chief diversions of the evening will be the faro, roulette, and dice games. The students will be furnished with Klondike currency with which to play games and buy drinks from an old fashioned bar. Members of Pi Beta Phi will be Spanish dancers and barmaids, with the music by the Kandy Kids orchestra.

The popular costume will probably be an ancient vest, cowboy chaps, and a Mexican sombrero, as a real western flavor has been promised by the committee. As a counteracting influence a large force of policemen will be on hand.

Last year the party proved very successful. Barmaids, dancers, and a jail were included. A sheriff and his posse kept the party down to a decent level and were required to deal harshly with some who grew too bold with a six-shooter. Lieutenant John Kellogg, in charge of gambling devices this year, promises no interference on the part of zealous law enforcers except in extreme cases.

Cashier of Lincoln State National Bank Addresses Students.

George Woods, cashier of the Lincoln State National Bank, spoke on "Business Ethics" at a meeting of the University Commercial Club on Thursday morning. In developing his subject, Mr. Woods divided human activities into three domains. The first of these is the field of action under compulsion, or under positive law. The second is the domain of absolutely free choice. The third is the field of ethics, in which activities are controlled by an enforceable code of conduct and manners.

Mr. Woods stated that all restrictive laws have been passed because people persist in violating the code of ethics in exercising what they consider as their personal rights. The Eighteenth Amendment, legislation controlling the railroads, the Pure Food laws, and restrictive laws on banking have all been enacted because business men abused their privileges. The code of ethics of the business world has been much improved during the past two decades. Business men in all lines are trying to clean up their own businesses. Mr. Woods concluded by saying that the ideal should be to so conduct business as to make restrictions on activity unnecessary.
