Art Students Go to Omaha to See Exhibit of Vienna School Children

A traveling exhibit of paintings by children of Professor Cizek's school of creative expression in Vienna, on exhibition in the Fine Arts room at the Omaha City Library, was visited Saturday by students of the art department and others interested in art, under the direction of Associate Professor Hermine J. Stellar, head of the drawing and painting department. The party met at the Burlington station at 8 o'clock.

The collection has been shown in New York and at the Art Institute in Chicago. Sunday was the last day of its two weeks' stay in Omaha, from which city it will go to Denver. It will travel about the important cities of the United States during the coming year, after which it has been asked for by Italy.

Paintings and wood carvings chiefly comprise the collection. The pictures teem with life and color, and deal with the lively subjects of interest to the children, between the ages of 5 and 16 years, who executed them.

On a similar expedition last Saturday, Dr. H. C. Kollar, who is in charge of the exhibit being shown in Omaha, devoted the entire forenoon to explaining the pictures to the visiting students.

The Fine Arts room at the Omaha Library will be open from 2 to 6 o'clock Sunday. Anyone who was unable to accompany the group on Saturday wishes to avail himself of the last opportunity of seeing the exhibit.

Dr. Kollar lectured on the exhibit from the Cizek school at the Art Gallery at 8 o'clock Saturday evening. Attendance at the lecture counted toward make-ups. The lecture was however, open to the public. A special invitation was extended to the Lincoln Artists' Club, and to art teachers in the public schools.

Jorgenson Speaks at Agricultural College

Arthur Jorgenson, secretary of the University Y. M. C. A., addressed the students at the Agricultural College last week in "Glimpses of Rural Japan." Mr. Jorgenson discussed the intensive farming of the Japanese people. The average farm in Japan, he said, is two and one-half acres, while in the United States it is 120 acres. Conditions resulting from the dense population—400 to the square mile, as compared with 20 in Nebraska—were also discussed. Most of the Japanese people are living on far less than the American "living wage," he declared.
