W.A.A. PASSES TRAINING RULES
Vote Unanimous In Special Meeting of Association Held Wed. Evening.

At a special meeting of the Women's Athletic Association held Wednesday evening in the Social Science Auditorium, the training rules governing participation in all W. A. A. sports were passed unanimously. Those women who fail to keep a satisfactory training record, that is, no more than five infringements, will be ineligible for tournament competition during that sport season. The rules are as follows: To eat three regular meals a day; to eat nothing between meals except fresh fruit; to drink nothing but milk or water between meals; to drink only one cup of coffee, tea, or cocoa a day; to sleep eight consecutive hours each night, being in bed at 11 o'clock every night with the exception of Friday, Saturdays, and nights before holidays; to walk briskly for one-half hour each day or to take one hour of some out-door exercise; to take a shower after each W. A. A. practice; to take a soap bath at least every other day; and to never smoke. These rules will go into effect at the beginning of basketball practice and must be lived up to by all those who wish to earn any W. A. A. points. Five infringements, two excused by the coach for some good reason and three unexcused, will be allowed, but a greater number will mean membership or tournament mean forfeiture of all rights to class competition. Squad points will not be awarded those who break more than the allotted number of rules.

Ten Years Ago

Charles H. Morrill, president of the board of regents for the past twelve years, had donated an additional sum of five hundred dollars to the museum. This sum was to be used in connection with the gathering of specimens for the geological and paleontological collections. Eastern schools had for some time been gathering the best of their specimens from the Bad Lands of Nebraska and Mr. Morrill was heartily in favor of the University of Nebraska securing the many valuable things that otherwise would go to enrich the museums of Yale, Harvard and other eastern schools. Meat and pie was becoming less popular in the diet of students according to research carried on at the College of Agriculture. Since the establishment of the cafeteria, the consumption of meat had fallen off twenty per cent and a similar decrease was noted in the eating of pie. In the case of pie, fruits and light puddings had taken its place as a dessert. An exchange told of the scarcity of water on the campus of the University of Kansas for the past few weeks. The city engineer of Lawrence had finally succeeded in getting a plentiful supply of the liquid to the students, but there was considerable complaint concerning the quality of the supply. According to the Daily Kansan the water was described as "looking like castor oil and tasting worse." The water had been tested however and found to be neither impure nor harmful.

CHANCELLOR REPLIES TO RECENT ATTACKS

needs. It would have been easy to yield to Mr. Newbranch, the editor of a great paper, and save the criticism which inevitably follows a failure to make places for friends of those who have the public ear; but in making appointments to teaching positions an executive must consider those qualifications that I have previously mentioned; and, with all due respect, the regents and administrative officers of the university have more knowledge and experience than those who often sit in judgment upon their acts. It may not be inappropriate to add further that his appointment, in so far as I know, would not have the approval of the deans of the colleges concerned or any of the professors teaching in the department to which he would naturally have been assigned as the result of his training and experience. "I would seek now, as I have in the past always sought, to avoid any controversy with Mr. Newbranch. I do not question his sincerity in urging the appointment of one whom he appears to think worthy of comparison with the great Steinmetz. It is, however, certainly not sufficient reason for appointment to a position in the university that a man has a particular political affiliation or that he has a group of influential friends who believe him to be unusually brilliant. I only ask that Mr. Newbranch credit me with the same sincerity that I cheerfully concede to him. I wish my official acts to be so clean that I can ever raise the question with myself as to whether my real motive in any recommendation for appointment was to provide a place for a friend of someone with influence, at the expense of the taxpayers."
