HUNTER TELLS OF PLANS FOR "HAMLET" PRODUCTION

sion concerning rather slim support of.
"All kinds," was the crisp reply. "This is my first experience on the road and I've learned a lot about people in various parts of the country. However, I think that every player should have his following on the road as well as in New York, for, after all, it is the outsiders who make up our audiences in New York."
Then he told how at Missoula, Mont., he had had to request the audience to refrain from throwing their peanuts at him until the end of the show, when, he told them, he would be able to eat them.
Mr. Hunter attended preparatory school in Massachusetts, but abandoned his college course to start his stage career with the Washington Square Players of New York City when he was seventeen. Next he toured the Orpheum circuit with Sarah Padden, and was then offered the part of "Bobby" in Booth Tarkington's "Clarence."
His next engagement was with Billie Burke in "The Intimate Strangers," another Booth Tarkington comedy. For the last three years he has been playing in "Merton of the Movies," with the exception of the time taken out for motion picture productions in the summer.
Mr. Hunter wouldn't say whether he liked the pictures or the stage best, but he did voice his intense dislike for Los Angeles. "I have never been in a more stupid city," he declared. San Francisco, Quebec, and New Orleans are the cities with the atmosphere which he likes.

Ten Years Ago

Someone representing himself to be a member of the staff of The Daily Nebraskan had called at the Western Newspaper Union where the paper was then published, and asked for a copy of the mailing list. As he said he was to use it for checking purposes it was given him by one of the printers. This act, coming as it did just before the election of the staff for the coming semester, seemed to indicate that considerable interest was being taken. It had been the intention of the staff to publish a list of all the subscribers after the applications had been filed, but now it was to be withheld until the missing list was returned.
Football figures for the past season had been compiled showing that the game had been played by 450 colleges, 66,000 secondary schools, and 1500 teams not connected with educational institutions, but representing organized athletic organizations. Thirty-four thousand games had been played and 152,000 players had participated. Estimates had placed the number of spectators attending football games in the United States in the fall of 1914 at 6,292,000 persons. The largest gathering was at the Harvard-Yale game held in New Haven, where 70,000 persons occupied twenty-nine miles of seats. Season scores from Everett high school of Everett, Mass., had a total of 600 points to their opponents' none. In college world, the Missouri School of Mines amassed a total of 560 points to their opponent's none.

Twenty Years Ago

The old grudge against the military department held by the athletic interests, after having lain dormant for some time, had again broken forth and a clash seemed imminent. The basketball men were the aggrieved party in the case, and the trouble seemed to be caused by Commandant Chase's stoutly refusing to excuse a couple of basketball players for a night or two in order that they could put the time in on practice. A statement made by one of the basketball men ran: "Captain Chase never did favors for athletics and can see no good in anything except his narrow sphere of 'Militarism.' Almost any department in the University would have been glad to excuse the men, but of course his department is so much more important and superior to other departments that perhaps he ought to be excused." When a reporter went to interview the commandant, he was found to be at the state farm and not expected to return that day, so his side of the story was unknown.
At a meeting of the Nebraska Pioneers the question was discussed as to the advisability of taking into the club those persons who had come into the state as late as 1869. The question was finally referred to a committee.
Only six men and the coach were to make the first basketball trip of the season. The team was to be gone for a week and were to play five games.
A sleigh ride party had been planned by one of the literary societies. It was said that "The men's quartet and orchestra will be on hand to furnish the music which cannot be supplied by the swelling charms singing 'Old John Jones.'"
UNIVERSITY OF WISCONSIN—More than 950 men played on baseball teams here last year.

POOL GIVES LECTURE ON BACTERIA TO FRESHMEN

been estimated that there are one billion times as many bacteria in the human body as there are people on the earth.
Not All Harmful.
"Another mistaken idea that people have about bacteria," continued Dr. Pool, "is that they are all harmful. Such an impression is absolutely incorrect for many of them are necessary to the correct functioning of certain parts of the body."
Dr. Pool declared that if one-half the time and money now being exended in trying to bring new lands under cultivation was used in combating plant diseases, which are caused by bacteria just as human diseases are, there would be no need of worrying about the future food supply.

"Science is more a state of mind than the consideration of a particular subject," said Dr. Pool, in speaking of the ideals of science. "To extend the boundaries of human knowledge, to apply this knowledge to the service of man, and to use it so that men and women may solve their problems, rather than be defeated by them, are the commands of science."
The story of the work of Pasteur, the young French chemist who made such important biological discoveries about micro-organisms, was also told by Dr. Pool.

NEW YORK UNIVERSITY—In the Intercollegiate Chess League, N. Y. U. was clearly superior in a series of four matches against the University of Pennsylvania, Buffalo University, and Cornell held during the Christmas holidays.
