Organize Research in Recognition of Needs of the Small Business Man

LeRoussignol, Robb, Virtue, Martin, and Cole Are on Committee.

"The pressing need for business research at the present time in Nebraska is in connection with the small business man, according to the bulletin of business research issued by the college of Business Administration, recently. The large corporations are alert to their problems. With the exception of a few establishments in the two large cities, the dominant business interest in Nebraska is the small concern. While the amount at stake in each establishment may not be great, in the aggregate, because of the great number of small units, the need of business research in the problems of the small business man is of prime importance."
