ALUMNI INFLUENCE.

In the College Press department of The Daily Nebraskan there appears an editorial from the Indiana Daily Student in which Charles Russ Richards, president of Lehigh University, charges that alumni exert an evil influence on the undergraduates of American Colleges.

There can be no doubt of the powerful influence alumni can and do exert on the character of an educational institution. Whether this influence is good or evil is an open question.

STUDENT RELIGION.

"The Christianity of the students today is a rather washed-out religion," Dr. Bruce Curry of the Biblical Seminary of New York City declared Wednesday in opening the series of Bible study discussion groups.

There is, nevertheless, one fact which cannot be ignored. Despite the fact that many students are indifferent and complacent in their attitude toward religion, it is also unfortunately true that these in charge of their religious education have often bungled their work.

Not only is there an indifference to religion but there is an ignorance of its actual meaning. Many students are unable to give coherent form to their own idea as to just what religion is.

It is instruction and discussion of the kind offered by Dr. Curry which may go far to dissipate this ignorance and indifference.

Alumni Influence—Good or Bad? Alumni of Western Conference universities are charged by Charles Russ Richards, president of Lehigh University, with corrupting athletics and morals of their respective institutions by encouraging graft and drinking.

In part President Richards says, "Very largely through alumni influence inter-collegiate athletics have been so prostituted as to render them positively undesirable in their effects upon the general character and the code of ethics of college students.

It is doubtful whether liquor conditions are worse than they were a few years ago. The older grads say the situation is fully 100 per cent. better. Yet, the problem is still one of the most complex for the deans, and President Richards doubtless is justified in saying that alumni are more detrimental than helpful in allaying the evil.

Every institution depends primarily upon its alumni for existence and growth. It is because of this fact the grads should use every precaution to exercise the type of influence that will counteract President Richards' accusation.

Law Must Be Obeyed

A committee of the First Plymouth Congregational Church has looked up the city ordinance and found that it is forbidden to place chairs or to allow people to stand in the aisles during services.
