Was Formerly Governor of Iowa and Secretary of United States Treasury.

Leslie M. Shaw, ex-governor of Iowa and former secretary of the treasury, will speak at an all-University convocation in the Temple at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning. His subject will be "The Constitution."

"Mr. Shaw spoke here at a convocation many years ago, in the old Memorial Hall," remarked Professor Paul H. Grummann, director of the School of Fine Arts. "His address was one of the most eloquent I have ever heard. I have had charge of the convocations for a long while, and I think that, in view of my experience, I know whereof I speak. The audience was unusually large and Mr. Shaw entertained it every minute of his talk."

Although a native New Englander, born and reared upon a Vermont farm, Mr. Shaw worked his way through Cornell College, Iowa, to which state his family had moved. He later graduated from the Iowa College of Law.

As president of a bank in Denison, Iowa, Mr. Shaw endowed an academy and normal school there. He became president of its board of trustees. In 1898 he was given the degree of LL. D. by Simpson College, Iowa.

His start in politics was made during the free silver controversy of McKinley's administration when he was chosen by the Republican party to reply to a speech made on the subject by William Jennings Bryan. The International Monetary Convention at Indianapolis, in 1898, elected him its permanent chairman.

Mr. Shaw was elected governor of Iowa in 1897 and kept the office until 1902. He became secretary of the treasury in Theodore Roosevelt's administration.

Since his retirement from the cabinet Mr. Shaw has increased his fame as a lecturer and author. He is interested in religion, and has served as a lay delegate at several general conferences of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Students in Magazine Writing Course Make $350 Selling Classroom Articles

Good Subject and Persistence All That Is Needed, Says Instructor.

Students taking the course in magazine writing at the Agricultural College last year received approximately $350 for their literary efforts, according to figures compiled on manuscripts sold to date. The highest priced article brought sixty dollars, the second highest forty dollars, and the third highest thirty-five dollars. A very large number of articles brought smaller prices.

Money received by many faculty members and professional newspaper workers taking the course was eliminated from consideration in compiling these figures, which represent only student work. All three of the articles bringing the best prices were the first real literary work of the persons producing them and were written as regular classwork. The two articles bringing the best prices were accepted at once by the first magazines to which they were offered.

"I never hold out to students the idea of making money particularly, although having to do a real job and winning a little success along the way is a powerful stimulus," said Prof. R. P. Crawford in discussing the results of the work. "Success in article writing consists largely in being able to know a good story when one sees it, in learning how to put it up in attractive shape, and how to go about selling it. Many people fail because of a lack of persistence."

No evening course is being offered this year, although a day course covering the same subject matter meets at 11 o'clock Tuesdays and Thursdays at the Agricultural College.

teachers' convention will see the exhibit. Miss Gertrude Moore, assistant curator of the art gallery and lecturer on art, will deliver the gallery talk.

The patronesses who will preside over the gallery this evening will be Mrs. E. J. Angle, Mrs. H. B. Megrinis, Mrs. E. B. Perry, Mrs. Adrian Newens and Miss Jenny Z. Smith.

Tomorrow evening the hostesses will be Mrs. H. W. Orr, Mrs. T. F. A. Williams, Mrs. M. E. Vance, Mrs. E. H. Barbour, Mrs. George Day and Mrs. F. C. Hamer.

Mrs. W. H. Raymond, Mrs. John M. Stewart, the Misses Gere, Mrs. Carl Stekelberg and Mrs. C. D. Trapnager will preside on Friday evening.

Saturday evening's hostesses will be Mrs. A. E. Sheldon, Mrs. E. C. Folsom, Mrs. F. R. Hussong, Mrs. Max Meyer, and Mrs. F. E. Beaumont.

SENNING TALKS TO FRESHMEN

Addresses Lecture Class On Problems of Popular Government.

SAYS ORGANIZED RULE IS NEED OF SOCIETY

"Government is as essential to state and society as food and clothing is to the individual," said Professor J. P. Senning in his talk on "Some Problems of Popular Government," before Arts and Science freshmen Monday afternoon.

Professor Senning explained government by means of an analogy. "Take the word religion. It makes you think of a church at once. The church is the means of making religion effective, while religion itself is an ideal. Everyone has some religion and has somewhat the same ideal and deals with one self, government is an ideal and deals with a group. For instance, the United States government deals with the United States, and the government of Nebraska has to do with this state only.

"When the church is reorganized, the whole religion is not changed. In the same way the changing of Congress, the courts, or executive organization is not the changing of the government. Government is supposed to do the greatest possible amount of good for the greatest number of people, and changes are merely to improve the machine."

Mr. Senning questioned the statement that man is a political animal. He said man has social relations with his fellow beings, and next came the political instinct. Whenever a group of men are found, there is always the instinct to keep order. When ever this makes a public appearance, it is called political. This instinct has been present since the first man set foot on the earth.

It was illustrated on the blackboard that from one person ruling a country, a change had been made so that a great number have a hand in the government. With this change of power came a change in purpose. "Government was once thought to be a means of conquest, of extending power and of preserving order in society," the speaker continued. "This was called individualism, and gave the people as much freedom as possible.

"When different social changes were made and cities and industries began to develop, different demands were made of the government, and it took over a new burden. This new function was called 'paternalism,' and the ruling power took it upon itself to help weaker people. (Continued on Page Three.)

The University of Nebraska Glee Club won third place Monday evening at the first annual contest of the Missouri Valley Intercollegiate Glee Club Association at Kansas City in which seven clubs participated. Missouri won first and Ames placed second.

The purpose of this contest was to decide which team should represent the Valley at the international contest to be held in New York City later in the month. This will be the first time that a Missouri Valley school will be sent so far east to represent the middle west.

"What Every Woman Knows" to be Read by Ellen Van Volkenburg

Ellen Van Volkenburg, said by critics to be one of the most talented character interpreters on the stage today, will read "What Every Woman Knows," a brilliant comedy by James Barrie, Thursday evening at 8 o'clock at the Temple Theater. Miss Van Volkenburg's reading is presented under the auspices of the Dramatic Club. Tickets can be bought from club members.

The play deals with an unappreciated wife and a conceited husband, a member of Parliament. When the chance comes to him to deliver his most powerful speech to Parliament he leaves his wife for another woman. He had just been called a failure by the "political boss" when his wife enters bringing with her a copy of the address which they had written together. The boss sees the copy and promises him success. So, it develops that the theme of the play is that every woman knows she is constantly aiding man to achieve success though she receives no credit for it.

Miss Van Volkenburg gives an imitative interpretation of the play based on Maude Adam's production. She has seen the play presented only once and she has never studied the text. She is at present director of the California "Theater of Golden Bough."

INSPECT NEBRASKA R. O. T. C. THIS WEEK

Major John H. Hester of Washington to Be Here Friday and Saturday.

Major John H. Hester, direct representative of the Chief of Infantry office, Washington, D. C., will arrive here Thursday to inspect the R. O. T. C. unit Friday and Saturday. The major will inspect both the field classes and classroom work on these two days.

There will be no special demonstration for the inspection and only the regular classes scheduled for these days will be examined. The freshmen and sophomore drill will be inspected on the field if the weather permits and if not, the classroom work will be watched. The juniors will be examined in their classes on minor tactics and the seniors in tactics and administration. Companies K and L Friday, and M Saturday will represent the unit in this inspection.

Major Hester is examining the leading R. O. T. C. units of Iowa, Missouri, Minnesota, and Nebraska at this time. He will go no farther west and is missing many of the schools in this corps-area. It is thought that this is the first time that any officer from the central office in Washington has ever been this far west on inspection of R. O. T. C. units which shows that the Nebraska unit has gained distinction and rating among the units of the country. He does with the gold star rating that is held but is simply to give information but is simply to give information to the central office of Chief of Infantry.
