tals in the third year after he had fled. They betook themselves into city the city and kept themselves within their walls. Thou shalt not burn a dead body in the city. Before the city extended a plain, hills encompassed the city. It is a hundred years since Jacobus was king. Jacobus was busy in the front line, he attended to everything, fought much in person, and often struck down the enemy. Isfael gave his attention to the appointment of priests. Life has been granted to us, a people of extensive sway.
"An unknown land A. D. 895. May I be able to accomplish my endeavor to serve the king. It is uncertain how long life will continue. There are many things which may be said. While the war was raging three thousand men were slain, the leaders with their chiefs were taken, nothing but peace was sought, God ordains all things."

THOSE INSIDIOUS PACIFISTS
Operator 38, who has been trying to track down the person or persons unknown who attempted to poison the University Night goat, mentioned on the front page, asserts that everything points toward some agent of Paul Blanshard as the criminal. M. Blanshard, who spoke to Nebraska students last fall on world peace and on labor problems, is known to be an agent of the Third Internationale at Moscow, Russia, since he is reported to have campaigned for LaFollette at the November elections. It is expected that the American Legion, Post No. 3, will soon issue a resolution condemning the action of the man who poisoned the goat, and praising the attitude of the University officials, who are doing everything possible to keep it alive.

It is reported that University officials do not approve of the series of talks the World Forum has arranged in order to bring about a discussion of military training in the University. These discussions stir the students up, make them restless, and cause them to think. Ergo, they are bad, and have been postponed until after the legislature decides on the University building-fund levy. The authorities condemn the World Forum for arranging talks on controversial subjects.

Henry VIII of England, that notorious ruler, put through a bit of legislation which should interest University authorities. A rule of this kind would make the situation at Nebraska more comfortable for the executives. It was entitled, "An Act to Abolish Diversity of Opinion."

COQUETTE
Cherries hang all along the branch;
Red, ripe fruit—
Round, and almost black with richness.
The sun has kissed them
Till they are soft and fragrant.
They have the lusciousness of lips,
That have been kissed and kissed—
Of a girl's lips, kissed till they sting with blood.
I, too, am a branch,
And the red, ripe things that I parade
Are hearts.
You say I have one heart?
No; there are many;
For how could one heart
Hold all the loves
That I have known.
I cannot keep them from ripening.
Somehow the sun will touch them;
And they drink the rain eagerly
Until they are full and break,
And a red dripping
Stains the ground.
—PORTIA.

A NOTE ON SELF-HYPNOTISM
"Everybody knows why I am in the Legislature," asserted Monte Munn before a meeting of the Junior League of Women Voters, and then went on to explain the reason. Mr. Munn's long training on the old school's football team should have made him more sure of himself.

MATINS
Every morning, when I read the newspapers, if I discover that the social order is still intact, I thank the heavens that, now, I am on the right side.

THE HIGHER EDUCATION
(Dedicated to the eternal English 22)
The bell rings, and the teacher calls the roll:
"Mister Allen, Miss Anderson, Miss Bays;
Miss Betzer, Miss Brownell, and Mister Cole;
Miss Dailey, Mister Edwards, Mister Hays—"
And so on, as each student answers "Here!"
And straight-away relaxes into sleep.
Each student's mind is desert-bleak and drear.
The clock hands on their long round slowly creep.
The students softly snore. Their peace is deep.
—LEWIS.

A MATTER OF SOME IMPORTANCE
He makes love as if he were Romeo, as if it were the most interesting game in the universe. He makes no false moves, says no inappropriate word, performs all the gestures, etherializes his personality, speaks softly about the stars and criticizes the mythic cosmogony of the savages who inhabit the globe. . . . The young lady put an end to it all by accepting him at his word; wishing for his improvement (if not his heart) she chided him for being too idealistic.
—SATYRANUS.

A NOTE ON NAMING CHILDREN
Dear Montesrey,
Have you ever noticed that the names of almost all the great love poets begin with the "s" sound?—Sappho, Solomon, Shakspear, Swineburne, and Celia. There must be something peculiar about this particular sound. What about a doctor's thesis on it? At least I think it desirable that all parents be informed of my discovery and be guided thereby.
—JANUS.

SHE PUTS IT PERSUASIVELY
Reginald,
I like them timorous and shy;
I loathe a bold monocled eye;
For I, you see, quake at the knee,
If bad, bold men just look at me.
In short, dear Reggie, I'm shy, too,
So why can't we be shy a deuz?
—CELIA.

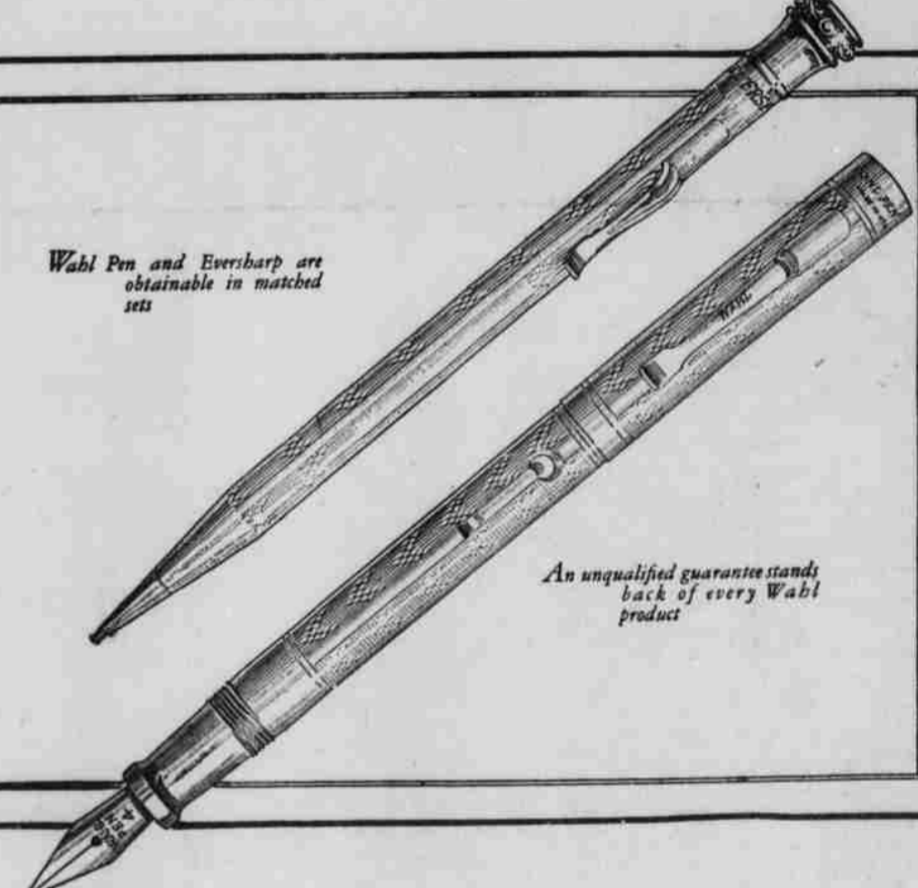

FROM THE NOTEBOOK OF ADONIS:
A thing of beauty is a joy forever; ideas lose their original glamor with the growth of wisdom. That is why the intelligent man admires a beautiful woman, but does not talk to her.
—CLAIRE MONTESREY.

Andrews Declares Use of Cosmetics By Men Is Feminizing the Country

The use of cosmetics by the men is feminizing the United States, according to Neal R. Andrews of New York, at an address recently delivered in Chicago.
"Today our rugged males flaunt as much gaiety as the fair sex. Men are patrons of cosmetics. More than 500,000 men in the United States are using cosmetics secretly," said Mr. Andrews.
The same issue of a Rocky Mountain district college paper, contained a long story about the free distribution of sample bottles of well-known and nationally advertised brand of hair tonic to all students of that university.
All organizations, clubs, fraternities, sororities, and societies were requested to get in touch with the manager of this publicity stunt and turn in the number of samples they desired. This was the first time that the student body was in the receiving line for something to be given away.
A later report showed that the students accepted the gift. It was said that at a basketball game that evening it was necessary to stop the game until all the windows could be opened.
