Would Extend Examination System Says Faculty Of Colorado University

Educators Contradict Zona Gale Who Says "The System Is Wrong."

A direct contradiction to the statement made a month ago by Zona Gale, well-known author, that "The whole examination system is wrong. It depends too much on luck and a certain kind of cleverness. It is just another addition to the useless drudgery which holds education back," the faculty of the University of Colorado went on record as believing that final examinations are indispensable.

A questionnaire was sent to every member of the faculty reading, "Do you believe in final examinations? Why?" In none of the replies was the slightest doubt shown but that final examinations are a necessary part of the present American system of education; in fact, some advocated an extension of the use of the examination.

Some of the direct quotations made by members of the faculty in favor of final examinations follow: "Because the preparation for a final examination gives the student a general idea of the course as a whole and of the relations of the different parts of the course to one another. Only by a final examination will the average student get such a birdseye view."

"Because final examinations require an effort to do one's best, which is fairly prolonged, and which is yet not too prolonged. Periods of stress, when one had to exert every resource of intellect and every ounce of energy, occur in the lives of most persons; and examinations furnish good preparation for them."

"Because a fair examination is the best test of a student's knowledge of the subject."

Some of the instructors were of the belief that it would be possible to extend the system of examinations. One professor said, "Indeed I believe that the system of final examination could be extended so as to become a real final examination, covering at the end of four years' work, all the work done during that time."

The question at both meets is: "Congress should be given the power to overrule by a two-thirds vote of both houses the decisions of the Supreme Court declaring acts of congress unconstitutional." The order of the speakers on the affirmative team is: George Johnson, Volta Torrey and Alexander McKie. Members of the negative team are David Sher, Ralph Brook, and Lloyd J. Marti.

Says University Is All Right; Tells Critics To Investigate Individuals

Oklahoma Pastor Makes Informal Inspection of University of Oklahoma.

Declaring that the great majority of students are in the University for the sole purpose of making good, Rev. Percy H. Nickless, pastor of the First Presbyterian church in Ponca City, Oklahoma, severely scored the critics of the University. Mr. Nickless made this statement after he had made a week's informal inspection of the University of Oklahoma while delivering a series of lectures in Norman.

During the last week in February Nickless delivered a series of lectures in Norman and in the meantime made numerous visits to the University for the purpose of studying the work of students there. He came to the conclusion that the type of student who is in the University for the social prestige is very much the minority.

Feeling that the reports over the state to the effect that students are mere pleasure seekers were false, Nickless decided to use the conclusions gained from his inspection of the University in a sermon defending the institution.

Excerpts from the sermon follow: "I have found out, to my great satisfaction, that there are hundreds of boys and girls in the University who are there for the sole purpose of making good; with the predominant idea of reaching success, and that the few who were there for the purpose of which we have heard so much are few, that they are in small minority."

"If you have any misgivings as to the University with regard to faculty, I advise you to go down there and see for yourself and if you have any young people from your home or from among your acquaintances who are not making good do not investigate the University but investigate the individual."

"TUT TUT" CAST HOLDS MEETING

Rehearsal of First Act of Musical Comedy Set for Tonight at 7:30.

The first meeting of the cast and business assistants of the annual Kosmet Klub production, "Tut Tut," was held Monday night in the Armory and the entire play was read by Cyril Coombs, '23, author and director of the production this year.

Although the entire cast has not been selected as yet, rehearsals will start in earnest tonight when work will start on the first act. The remainder of the cast will be chosen and announced in a few days.

The cast of the production will be much smaller this year than in previous years and Kosmet Klub members believe that this fact will make "Tut Tut" an improvement over previous shows. Although a larger number tried out this year, the cast was more carefully picked and the rehearsals will be under more careful supervision than before.

It is necessary that all business assistants be present at the rehearsal tonight so that they can be organized and assigned to their various duties. The rehearsal will be held at 7:30 in the Armory.
