DR. HARWOOD IS NEW INSTRUCTOR

Is Made Associate Professor in Ancient Language Department.

IS FACULTY MEMBER AT YALE UNIVERSITY

F. C. Harwood, assistant professor of Latin at Yale University, will come to the University of Nebraska next fall as associate professor in the department of ancient languages. A graduate of Yale University, Dr. Harwood later received there his degree of doctor of philosophy. Service in the army and European travel are also included in his career. He will instruct here in Latin and perhaps in Greek. Next year the department will have, for the first time, five or six graduate students. Professor Harwood and Prof. J. A. Rice will work out an entirely new course for graduate students which will give a general view of the entire field instead of concentrating upon a special phase.

Ten men from several of the leading universities were considered for the position for which Dr. Harwood has been selected. One from Michigan, three from Yale, two from Harvard, two from Princeton, one from Oxford, and one from Cornell.

A fellow professor at Yale says the following in recommendation of Dr. Harwood: "He is about thirty, a Ph. D. of Yale, has traveled abroad, served in the army during the war, and is interested in music, literature, undergraduates, and life generally. He is, I believe, far and away the best and most successful teacher in the department and would be a most useful man in building up your work."

AGRICULTURISTS VISIT AG COLLEGE

Kansas Men Inspect Greenhouse Equipment at Experiment Station.

Three representatives of the Kansas Agricultural College were visitors Monday and Tuesday. These men, Prof. L. E. Melchers of the department of botany and plant pathology, Prof. S. C. Salmon of the department of agronomy, and Mr. C. O. Johnson from the office of cereal investigations, bureau of plant industry, were here to examine the greenhouse equipment of the Nebraska experiment station.

They were entertained at a dinner on Monday evening at the College of Agriculture campus. On Tuesday they inspected the plant pathology greenhouses and conferred with members of the departments of agronomy, plant pathology, and botany.

Kansas Agricultural College has received an appropriation for new greenhouses. Two of six which are proposed are to be built this year. The departments of agronomy, botany and plant pathology of the Kansas institution are to use these.

The men in those departments desire to have the best and most up-to-date equipment in the greenhouses. In furtherance of that end they have been studying greenhouse equipment at various experiment stations, and are paying particular attention to the unique equipment at the Nebraska station. They seemed to be favorably impressed with the refrigeration and lighting systems in use here.

The local plant pathology greenhouses are equipped with apparatus enabling the investigator to control soil and air temperatures, soil moisture, and light. The systems in use are unique and quite satisfactory.

If the Kansas men adopt the Nebraska system, it will be the second time that it has been copied. Michigan Agricultural College has already installed equipment similar to that of Nebraska. In fact, the Nebraska station stands at the top in equipment designed for the study of plant diseases. The addition of much needed larger and more up-to-date greenhouses to house the apparatus will give this station one of the best equipped plants for the study of plant life in the country.

Students at Ohio State University are in danger of the law. They have made a practice of stealing coffee pots from a campus restaurant in protest of a ten cent charge for a cup and the owner threatens them with legal steps if the practice is not stopped.

Collection of fines for dancing is an important source of revenue at Oxford University, where the famous American sport is strictly forbidden.

Women at University of Oklahoma Train for First Co-Ed Track Meet

Jumping, Basketball Throwing, Running and Miscellaneous Events Scheduled.

Powder puffs and marcees are being momentarily thrown aside for the thrills of breaking tape and seeking fame in trackdom by the co-eds of the University of Oklahoma. Girls who have sat quietly by and watched the opposite sex occupy the limelight may now have the opportunity to oust man from his throne and cover themselves with glory and fame. The physical education department of the University of Oklahoma is sponsoring an annual track meet which will be held the second week in May. This will be the first track meet for women ever held in the university.

General rules have been laid down for entrants by the directors of the meet. No more candy, pie, or late dates for the contestants if they have any hopes of being winners in the meet. Beside keeping to the training rules, women must enter in one event in each class and practice consistently.

Points earned in the meet will count on Women's Athletic Association requirements for earning a sweater as well as toward the trophy which will be given to the girl accumulating the highest number of points in the meet. One hundred points will be given by W. W. A. The only requirement for participation in the meet is registration with some member of the physical education faculty.

Iowa State Agricultural College, Ames, and Kansas Agricultural College, Manhattan, are Missouri Valley schools with chapters of Phi Sigma Kappa.

The membership of the fraternity is over eight thousand. Among the alumni are: Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad; Melville Davison Post, writer of fiction; Emmet D. HEAR DE BOSIS AT CONVOCATION

Italian Professor Speaks on "Where Does Fascismo Stand?"

GIVES HISTORY OF RISE OF MUSSOLINI

Dr. Lauro De Bosis of the Royal Academy of Rome was the convocation speaker yesterday, his topic being "Where Does Fascismo Stand?" His speech dealt mostly with the history of the rise of Mussolini, present prime minister of Italy, because as he explained, the history of the movement in Italy is practically the personal history of the famous Italian leader.

The speaker sketched the life and views of Mussolini before the war and told how he was a radical socialist before that event. He was famous as a socialist writer, some of his work being so revolutionary that he was expelled from Switzerland.

While in the trenches, Mussolini happened to meet a noted Italian professor and the two talked of the political condition of Italy. The country lacked political leadership as there were a number of parties and no concerted action could be obtained.

The two ended their discussion with the agreement that they would each go and draft a simple plan to help the country out of its difficulties. When they met again, they compared notes and found that their plans were almost identical. Mussolini then jokingly remarked that he would be prime minister some day and that he would appoint the professor as a member of his cabinet. The joke became a reality in a few years.

After the war, Italy became infected with a socialist party which seemed bent on the destruction of the country. It was then that the Fascist movement started. From the description given by the speaker of the movement it seemed very analogous in organization to the American Legion, it being formed mostly of returned soldiers and having a militarist attitude.

The King appointed Mussolini as prime minister and averted what promised to be a bloody revolution. The new minister had the majority party back of him and reforms were possible which never were before because of the number of political parties.

Dr. De Bosis pointed out that Mussolini was not really a dictator as the popular conception had it, but a leader. So long as he has the majority party behind him, he will remain in office and in event that it should disagree with him, he will have to resign in the same manner that an English prime minister does.

The speaker also answered a question as to the opposition of Mussolini to the Masonic order by stating that in Italy, the Masons were a secret order and that this was the objection to them.

The seniors of Florida State University have gone on record as wearing black derbies. They say that this is a sign of learning and attainment.

WILL INSTALL NEW Y. W. C. A. CABINET

Women Will Hold Ceremonial Service at 7 o'clock This Evening.

Agnes Kessler, the retiring president, will be in charge of the ceremonies. The installation will be in the form of a candle-lighting service to which all University women are invited.

The vesper choir will lead the procession and will be followed by the old and new cabinet members dressed in white. The hymn, "Love Divine A Love Excelling," will be sung by the choir as they march in. The scripture will be read by Agnes Kessler, and Doris Trott, the outgoing vice-president, will lead the prayer. Miss Irma Appleby, University Y. W. C. A. secretary will give a short talk.

The installation of the new officers will be realized in an effective candle-lighting service which will be followed by a response from the new president, Elsie Gramlich. She will also lead the prayer and benediction which will conclude the services. The recessional hymn will be "Hymn to the Lights."

Miss Compton Describes Need For Better Library Equipment

"A University library should have room to accommodate all of the students who wish to use the library books and who want a quiet place to study at any time," declared Miss Nellie J. Compton, librarian, in discussing the need of a new library building at the University of Nebraska.

When the University of Michigan built its new library it was estimated that the building should supply reading and study space for ten per cent of the students at a time. Practical use, however, proved that space should have been provided for fifteen per cent. The reading room in the main library at the University of Nebraska, according to Miss Compton, has seats for less than two hundred persons. Guessing the enrollment now on the campus roughly at 6,000, and reckoning even at the top conservative ten per cent, Miss Compton points out that the seating accommodations are two-thirds below even the minimum of adequacy.

For efficient service, large rooms should be maintained entirely for reserve desk work in an easily accessible part of the building, besides the large, general reading room for students using other library books.

Special rooms should be devoted to periodicals. Many periodicals now subscribed to by the library cannot be shelved where they are accessible to students and faculty, because of lack of room. A large number of books which should be on the reference shelves for the quick use of the librarian in answering questions are now in the obscurity of the stacks.

The library is shelving in various places books which should be within easier reach. Some are in the law library, others in the basement of the law building, and others in reading rooms about the campus.

Notices were sent out to the faculty last fall by the librarian requesting that library reference reading should be restricted to the minimum because of the physical impossibility of handling students with so little space for the loan and reserve desks. At the beginning of the summer session last year, all the reserve books were removed to the halls on the floor of the law building, and the adjoining classrooms were opened as reading rooms. Miss Compton predicts the same conditions for the coming summer session.

Space should be provided as reading rooms and seminar rooms for professors and graduate students.

An important cultural phase of college life which Miss Compton feels is neglected by hampering library conditions is the absence of general reading rooms for recreational and informational reading. Few students, she asserts, read other than the matter assigned to them by instructors. The devotion of a room to the purpose might, she believes, encourage cultural reading.

The thirty or more members of the library staff are considerably inconvenienced by the crowded conditions and the lack of proximity and centralization in the offices and work rooms.

"The librarians have felt for years," remarked Miss Compton, (Continued on Page Four.)

ATHLETIC BOARD SELECTS PLAN

Adopts System for Election of All Varsity Team Captains.

DETAILS OF METHOD NOT YET PERFECTED

The Athletic Board of Control at its meeting yesterday noon adopted the proposed system of electing all varsity team captains. The newly adopted system follows the preferential plan of elections. The plan has not been completely perfected and only a general summary of it is available at this time.

Only letter men in the sport may vote for the captain and they will be called without previous notice to vote at any time after the close of the season chosen by an election committee from the Board. The election committee will be a standing committee and will have three members chosen from the Board who will have general jurisdiction over all the elections.

Ballots provided for the letter men will be typed and will contain a list of men eligible to be elected as captain and also a list of men eligible to vote. On the ballot, the voters will indicate their first, second and third choices and will then sign it and deposit it in a sealed envelope.

The election committee will then canvass the ballots and the man receiving the largest number of votes will be declared unanimously elected by the committee. In the event of a controversy or situation which is not governed by a rule of the Board, the committee will have the power to make the decision.

If there is no majority given to one man in the election, the first choice will be considered as a nominating ballot and second and third preferences will be used to elect one of the men nominated by the first choice. If there still remains an unbroken tie, the committee will call for a new vote and the letter men will vote only on those who are tied.

The election committee will be chosen by the chairman of the Athletic Board of Control at the same time that the other standing committees are chosen. It will have complete jurisdiction over all the captaincy elections and will also enforce all the orders of the Board in regard to the elections.
