THE AWGWAN

The Awgwan is now approaching the first year of its existence since its suspension in 1923. The fact that Sigma Delta Chi, under whose direction it is published, will soon elect an editor for next year makes a discussion of the magazine's editorial policy rather timely.

The Awgwan has this year been merely a conventional college comic magazine. Any one who cast a critical eye over any considerable number of these magazines knows that few of them are really humorous. For the most part they are filled with bad puns and sex and gin jokes. This is an indictment which can be made not against a few of them, but almost against the entire group. Only occasionally does one find a college comic which escapes from the level of mediocrity, to which most of them conform, and attains the heights of real humor and satire.

It is, perhaps, needless to point out that the Awgwan has not been one of this small number. On the whole it has been unthinkably stupid. Whether this is due to the fact that there are no students in the University capable of writing real humor, it is difficult to say. If this is the case, then the magazine should cease attempting to be humorous and should seek a field of activity in which the students are able to do commendable work. If Sigma Delta Chi wishes to continue the policy which has made their magazine worse than mediocre, it is their privilege to do so, but they must look for a decrease in its popularity and its subscription list.

age of ten per cent of the Lincoln delegation usually succumb and have to be carried out." However, according to Dr. Barker, who always accompanies the pre-meds, this doesn't mean much, for the man who fainted first four years ago, performed the most difficult operation at the clinic last year. The Omaha medics added to the visitor's comfort last year by scattering ether around the operating room before the clinic. Most of the delegates will return to Lincoln this evening after the theater party and smoker.

The unusual money making plan that helped Davis is too lengthy to cover in these columns, but he suggests that every student write Mr. M. H. Rhodes, 1489 Pendleton, St. Louis, Mo.
