The College Press YOUR SUMMER'S WORK

Now comes the annual deluge of circulars from various promotion companies advising students to spend a "profitable" summer selling articles "necessary to every household," holding out a glittering promise of little work and excellent remuneration.
These companies take advantage of the fact that the student is anxious to do any honest work that will enable him to return to school the next fall. Usually they fail to point out that most homes are usually well supplied with necessities. While large profits apparently are assured, close investigation usually reveals the fact that a sample case is to be bought at a price sufficient to severely dent the average bankroll.
Again, returns for the summer's work are usually to be based on the number of articles sold by the agent, who is to be paid on the commission basis. The only way a student can really plan to attend school in the fall is to know definitely just how much money he is going to earn during the summer; a stipulated salary is best for the summer's work.
A few, though a very few, of these propositions are legitimate, and offer a real opportunity to the student who is looking forward to a profitable summer. But the really worthwhile salesmanship offers are so few and far between, so much of the needle in the haystack type, that to attempt to find them is almost a hopeless task.—The Oklahoma Daily.
Field Trips Saturday
Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock will be taken up with field trips of various sorts. The members and visitors must sign in advance.
Saturday evening at 7:30 a short business session will be held. Reports of the various committees will be read and there will be an election of officers for next year. At 8 o'clock a popular lecture will be given on the "Features of Scientific Interests in the Mt. Ranier Region" by Dr. R. J. Pool, University of Nebraska. The lecture will be illustrated with colored lantern slides.
There are about two hundred and twenty-five members in the Nebraska Academy; several of these belong to the American Academy.
This week's "Science" contains an interesting article about Professor Geza Doby, who will be the main speaker of the meeting, Thursday evening, May 7.
"Professor Geza Doby, visiting professor from Hungary, assigned to the botanical department of the Michigan Agricultural College, is to give the address on his work in plant enzymes before the Botanical and Biological groups at the University of Chicago, April 27; Iowa State College on April 29; University of Wisconsin, May 3 and a joint meeting of the Sigma Xi and Nebraska Academy of Science at the University of Nebraska on May 7," states the article.
"Professor Doby, professor of bio-mechanics of Budapest, came to the Michigan Agricultural School under the auspices of the American Foundation, whose headquarters are in East Lansing, Michigan. No exchange professor was sent to Hungary this college year, but in the coming college year, Dr. H. J. Strafsath of the department of bacteriology will go to Hungary. Plans are under way for extending the activities of the American-Hungarian Foundation to other institutions in addition to the Michigan Agricultural College, to include graduate students of high scholarships as well as professors."
