A CLEAN CAMPUS

Through careful planning, the University campus is more beautiful during September than at any other time of the year. When school opens it is bright and fresh and the flowers are still blooming. But soon after the students return the campus is littered with cigarette stubs and with papers.

Smoking is prohibited on the campus, as many signs will inform the student. But the rule has been flagrantly disregarded this fall and the campus is covered with trash as a result.

The rule against smoking can be enforced only by the cooperation of the student body. Faculty members cannot be expected to patrol the campus looking for smoking students. They have other things to do that are much more important.

Many fraternities have fines for members who throw cigarette stubs on the lawn. Such a system, while effective, would be impossible for a unit as large as the University.

So the problem resolves itself into a matter of cooperation. If the students will refrain from smoking on the campus its autumn beauty can be preserved for some time.

Student Opinion

To the Editor:
The football season is at hand. Every Nebraskan feels the thrill of the game—a wonderful college institution. Nebraska has ever had her name written in the history of this great college sport, and always near the top of the list. This year the prospects are good for a great season. The Scarlet and Cream athletes will be battling on even terms with the best in the country.

Among the stars reporting for the team is a man of marked ability in other athletic activities. With his best years before him, he has placed his name among those of the greatest sprinters in the world. On three occasions he has equalled world records of long standing. If he will be able to continue these activities without injury he will, by the word of one of the nation's best coaches, Henry F. Schulte, become the greatest sprinter of all time. He has a chance to better three world records, win Olympic honors; international fame for himself and above all, for Nebraska. Any one who doubts this coach's ability to judge should look into the back pages of track sport and see the names of world champions like Scholz and Simpson who received their sprint training from this coach.

This coach has recommended that Locke not play football because it will slow him down at any rate, and perhaps run the chance of injury. Locke is susceptible to injury. The fact is apparent when we remember that in his past two years of competition he spent perhaps the greater part of his time on the sidelines on account of injuries. A man with all the finer physical and mental qualities of a sprinter cannot stand the knocks of the football game even in its present stage of development. No one would ever attempt to submit a race horse to be used for heavy dray-horse duty and say that it was all right because it would hurt him. Yet the student body of Nebraska is crying out that Locke should play football because he is needed and because it will not impair his track chances.

What the students are asking is that Locke sacrifice international honors for himself and the school in order that Nebraska shall more nearly reach the high stage in national football honors. Charles Padlock, the world's greatest sprinter of all time, last fall wrote an article in which he pointed out that great football men never made world beaters in the sprint game. If the student body at Nebraska were to doubt the opinions of their own track coach, surely they would not doubt the ideas of a man who has spent years at the sport.

And after all, national honors last but one year, or perhaps two or three years at the most. International honors including perchance world records, will last forever.

You will say that Locke is the chooser. But Locke is man enough, chooser. Every man is his own athlete enough, with Husker spirit enough to pass up world honors and play football if the student body of Nebraska wants him too. If the student body wants Locke to run the miserable chance of injury in football (and that appears to be what it wants) Locke will run that chance. But if he does play football he is forfeiting to an extent his prospects of winning the sprint cup of the Missouri Valley; chances for national honors in track; and world record chances in the bargain.

Are we, as supporters of the fighting Huskers of Nebraska, going to let the glare and glory of football keep us from being broad minded enough to see a situation as it really stands. I am asking you, fellow Cornhuskers! —An "N" Man.

En masse intelligence tests for prospective freshmen were held at Northwestern University this year. The flock of candidates for admission were put through a two-hour session of questioning. From these replies the University believes it can tell not only the unfit but can guide individual students in the selection of courses and determine what the individual is best adapted for as a life work. Thirteen other universities and colleges, including Columbia, Minnesota, Chicago and Dartmouth apply somewhat similar tests arranged by the American Council of Education.—The Columbia Missourian.

--our shop scout says!

Girls! Irene Castle and Orkin's have combined forces!

—they've decided to abolish every wall flower at every dance this year. Just follow their advice, and the blind date who calls to take you to the ball will become your heavy suitor when first he sees you. Here's how:—be sure you're wearing one of the new Irene Castle party dresses that have just been unboxed at Orkin's. Lovely onyx of crepe Romaine in flower tints; gorgeous affairs, too, in hues as vivid as lipstick. —and whisper to your pocketbook: "They're only $34.50!"

"Put your best foot forward" says Buck's Booterie

—and girls, this is such easy advice to take when you buy your footwear at Buck's. Buy here if you would have your campus feet, afternoon-tea feet, dinner feet and dancing feet draw glances of approval. Wear their new one-strap patent leather slipper with its smart cable cord stitching and trim box heel—their pumps and strap models for dress wear. Choose for beauty, and discover also that it isn't necessary to attire your pedal extremities like canal boats in order to achieve utter comfort.

"Hat brim Etiquette" by Ben Simon & Sons

"Might as well use the wrong fork as to wear the wrong hat," says Mrs. Yarwood of the millinery section at Ben Simon & Sons. So, with your frocks of flaring skirt, wear one of the dashing new wider-brimmed hats. They're of felt, satin and velour at $5 and more, and are well worth any amount as a background for flirtatious glances! You fur-coated fortunates will be delighted with Simon's snug turbans of metallic cloth. Smart knockabout hats that will stand even harsh words and abuse, are small felts and velours, featured at $5.

After the mishap, call Lee Wigton

When someone spills the punch on your cherished dancing frock, or you fail to see the wet paint sign, just dial B6575 or call on the Lincoln Cleaning and Dye Works at 326 N. 11th, and the high note of tragedy will be eliminated from the incident. They do excellent work, reasonably and promptly. And perhaps those of you who sew a bit, would like to know that they do the more difficult kinds of pleating with great care and precision.

"The most fashionable notes" says Mr. Latsch

"are taken in our Green Back note books on our Green Edge note paper." Really, these are great aids toward acquiring a higher education. The loose leaf paper is boxed and has round corners—two features that eliminate those often rather-worse-for-wear notes. The notebooks themselves may be had in a variety of styles and from $1 to $2.95. They're backed in steel and defy the roughest usage. These of course are but two of the many superior items that Latsch Brothers carry in their business of "Purveyors to the college brain."
