REBUILDING U HALL

Old U Hall is in its last days. Its corridors and classrooms are emptiness and desolation. Some work has already been done by the wreckers and within a few weeks the first building of the University of Nebraska will be reduced to an exceedingly ugly and doleful reminder of its former self.

As soon as the weather permits some building will doubtless have to be constructed to take care of the departments formerly housed in U Hall which are now scattered about the campus in a most unsatisfactory fashion. The kind of a building this will be and its location are matters of considerable interest.

About old U Hall hovers memories and traditions dear to the alumni and undergraduates as well as to the faculty who figure in their formation. The building has been the center of the College of Arts and Science and as such the center of the entire institution since its founding. It has become the symbol of the spirit of the University in a way which no other building can hope to fulfill. It embodies legitimate tradition.

Architecturally U Hall is attractive and distinctive in its unpretentiousness. Its asymmetrical lines are a relief in contrast to the ugliness of the Teachers College building, the useless pillars of Social Science and the glary decorativeness of the Administration building.

There is of course the possibility that the building which replaces U Hall may be placed in some other part of the campus and it may even be a repetition of the familiar cracker-box type. The suggestion is rather frequent, however, that a replica of the present building be placed in the present location, retaining in that way the symbolic meaning which U Hall now portrays. If it is possible to use the same bricks for the outer walls the appearance of the building need be changed very little. In case this is impractical an effort could at least be made to secure an imitation of them.

Here is a problem which should receive the attention of individuals and organizations interested in maintaining real traditions. Campus sentiment can be made to count positively in the decision of the authorities in regard to the new building.

LET'S FORGET IT

Serious charges have been made against the Nebraska student body for its lack of spirit at the football rallies and the football games this year. The students have been called all kinds of names. The student opinion column of The Daily Nebraskan have been replete with comment giving reasons for this lack of support, remedies for it and so on.

The lack of spirit, however, is history now; so is the football season itself—with one exception, the game on Thanksgiving Day with Notre Dame.

Each university has one rival institution which it would rather beat than any other on the football field. At Yale it's Harvard, at Missouri it's Kansas, and at Nebraska it's Notre Dame. To use the sport term, we "point" for Notre Dame.

There is no use to talk now about what the spirit has been or what it might have been. What we have to do now is to create a new spirit for the coming game.

To relate how the Nebraska spirit defeated Notre Dame's wonder eleven in 1923 would be to repeat what everyone has heard time and time again. Let us just remember that it can be done and it was done two years ago.

We should stop wondering what is the matter with the Nebraska spirit. We won't have time for that, we will be too busy building up that spirit for the Notre Dame game.

of the collection. Parts of the old tower will also be saved.

Abandonment Was Unexpected

The complete abandonment of the building was totally unexpected by the physical plant department of the University, which always has plans ready for emergency schedules of the class rooms. This was a "super-emergency" in the words of Operating Engineer Ellis, who yesterday expressed satisfaction at the cooperation his department has received from all concerned in meeting the unprecedented emergency demand for space. Every class has been located, and the whole readjustment made with only a relatively few hours loss of class time.

Every building on the down-town campus has been pressed into service to its utmost capacity, and in addition several buildings adjoining the campus have been drafted into service. All available rooms in Temple, including all faculty rooms, Palladian and Union halls, cafeteria rooms, and Y. M. C. A. headquarters are used for classes.

The University Episcopal church basement is being used for English classes. Ancient language classes are meeting in the Presbyterian parsonage on Fourteenth street two doors south of R street. Several more English classes of Professor Staff and his co-faculty members are located in three rooms of Bancroft school. Some of the smaller classes of Professor Buck are meeting at his home. Even the stadium has been pressed into service for publication offices.

rooms where the new slate blackboards had been installed. They did not like to write on the cement glazed black plaster.

One of the examination questions was worded "Construct line values of the function of an angle which falls in the second quadrant?" From which present day students will admit that mathematics was no more a pipe course than it is now. There was a parting admonition on the board "Bring your tables on Monday," indicating that the questions were probably a weekly or monthly test administered on a Friday weekend.

Some more mathematical problems were found left on the wall in room 204. They were worked at least twenty-seven years ago, as 1898 was the last year that the mathematics department was in University Hall, and the slate boards were probably installed earlier than that date.

A Latin sentence was found on the south wall of room 203, where Latin classes were held in the decade before the twentieth century.

The slate in most of the other rooms was set during the summer months as the walls uncovered were found to be washed off clean and black, as they generally are over the vacation periods.

FAMILY ATTENDS UNIVERSITY

Father and Children Have Been in Nebraska Institution

Seven children of E. P. Sturdevant, who attended the University of Nebraska in 1879, have since been registered at the University, according to The Nebraska Alumnus. Two of his daughters, Marjorie Sturdevant, '29, and Florence Sturdevant, '26, are now attending the University. Louise Sturdevant, the oldest daughter, received her A. B. degree from the University in 1903, and is now an instructor in Arsenal Technical School at Indianapolis. C. F. Sturdevant, a former student who was in the same class, is now division engineer for the Burlington railroad. R. S. Sturdevant, ex-'12, and Dr. R. E. Sturdevant, ex-'17, are Lincoln dentists, the former being a member of the faculty of the College of Dentistry. Dr. A. B. Sturdevant, ex-'18, is practicing dentistry at David City.

Bengtson Publishes New Geography Book

A new book entitled "The Pupil's Workbook in Geography of Nebraska" by Prof. N. A. Bengtson of the geography department, has been published by Ginn and Company, Boston. This volume is intended to supplement the descriptive texts already in use, and carries out the problem method of teaching Nebraska geography. It contains a series of problems dealing with soil areas, climate, natural resources, various agricultural and manufacturing industries, highways, railways, and the cities of the state. It is especially suitable for use in the seventh and eighth grades or in junior high schools.

Susie Smart
--our shop scout says:

"The Phantom of the Opera" with Lon Chaney—at the Lyric all this week!

—here at last is your chance to see at popular prices, this magnificent spectacle of Parisian gaiety and intrigue! Five thousand people were required to carry on its breathless action; the Paris Opera House, was completely reconstructed for its making! See Lon Chaney in his most remarkable make-up; so complicated that it required three hours each day for its application. And for a thrill, watch the 16,000 pound chandelier fall from the ceiling of the Opera house upon the audience below. A real evening's entertainment—the "Phantom of the Opera!"

TAILORED AT FASHION PARK

No Wonder the Grand Hotel is so Popular!

—just try one of their fried chicken dinners served every noon and night in the cafe for 50c! Then YOU'LL know too, why so many students eat here. They also serve a daily 25c luncheon in the cafe—one that will give you new respect for the buying power of a quarter! All of their pies are homemade, even unto the minemeat. The Grand is first in the minds of student organizations, too, when they want a real banquet for a reasonable price!

It's Christmas—Card-Time at George Brothers!

—perhaps you have never seen as many in one place—but neither have you ever seen as many so conveniently arranged for selection! Artistic cards that require only an address to be ready to go; cards that are waiting for your distinctively engraved names; those too, that may carry both your individual sentiment and name (fine for fraternity and sorority greetings). Framed mottos at George Brothers, too—chosen with characteristic George Bros. discrimination. And "Kampus Compacts!" See them with their pennanted covers and you'll want one. Try their powder, and you'll buy more of them for gifts. $1 single; $1.50 double.

Hats for a Mere Dollar at Ben Simon & Sons!

—but they are not mere hats—of that you may be sure! They're smart chapeaux of felt and velvet that formerly sold as high as $7.50. Wednesday only at $1, in Ben Simon & Sons' Bargain Basement. Here is a solution to the problem of what to do about the fact that Harold likes 'em small, plain, and upturned of brim, while Henry prefers them large, droopy, and fussy! One of each kind, and no great investment in case Harold and Henry become Percy and George!

Distinctive Aids to Beauty at Piller's!

—the most successful looking feminine faces are those that are careful to use only high grade cosmetics! Might as well wear any old hat as to use any old powder, rouge or lipstick. That is why campus beauties do their shopping at Piller's. Here you will find compacts, lipsticks, rouges and perfumes—from Coty, Houbigant and other equally renowned firms. So extensive is the assortment that you are sure to find your favorite shade and aroma—any time at Piller's!
