

BURNS SHOWS SOME HOLDS

Famous Wrestler Give Husker Matmen Some Pointers And Demonstrations

WILL BE HERE ALL WEEK

"Farmer" Burns, famous wrestler, now living in Omaha, spent Tuesday afternoon and evening dispensing a few pointers on the manly art of pinning the shoulders of one man to the mat. And he did. In fact, he was able to do it with great speed. His holds seemed to follow logically, one after the other.

Burns has been in the wrestling game since he was eight years old. He has been in some six thousand matches and has lost only seven of them.

Burns says that the wrestlers are all in good shape and that all they need is a little improvement in the way of getting a hold on their man as well as changing the hold when it is necessary. In the exhibition given the wrestlers proved that they were in good shape as Burns had said and were learning the new holds. Burns is going to be around the campus for some time.

Burns stated that Nebraska should be proud of its two wrestlers, Stecher and Pesek. Stecher is staging a come-back in the game and throwing all of his men. Pesek is throwing all of his men as well. Burns says that these two are the greatest in their line in this country, and probably the world.

Lehigh Has Unique Mascot

Lehigh University has one of the most unusual mascots of any football team in the country. It is a mud turtle which was discovered making its way across the muddy field during signal practice. It was adopted and christened "Knockem." After each game the score is carved on his shell.

Northwestern Plans Stadium

Northwestern University plans the erection of a $1,000,000 three-decked stadium with a seating capacity of 75,000 persons.

DEBAUFRE ATTRACTS BRITISH ATTENTION

Address by Engineering Professor Here Is Reviewed by The London Times

The London Times recently published a column article entitled "Civilization and Mechanical Power," written by the scientific correspondent for The Times, and based on an address delivered by Prof. W. L. DeBaufre, of the department of mechanical engineering at the University of Nebraska last spring.

The Times correspondent summarizes Professor DeBaufre's opinions in part as follows: "Civilization as it is organized today and with it the possibility of leisure from the immediate struggle for existence to be devoted to research and philosophy, to the arts and pleasures of life, depends more directly on mechanical power more than on any other factor. This conclusion was pressed with force and eloquence by Professor DeBaufre in an address recently delivered at the University of Nebraska.

"The most direct avenue towards the solution of the problem of preventing a return to man-power with its consequent disintegration of civilization are to be sought, according to Dr. DeBaufre, in researches to improve the combustion of fuels, the production of mechanical power from the heat of combustion, and the better utilization of the mechanical power obtained. When even the most modern locomotive is drawing a train along the best laid line almost all the work is used in overcoming frictional resistances against the air and rails, and in the bearings. If we would save our civilization we must learn not to waste the mechanical power on which it is based."

Freshman Council To Meet Thursday

The Freshman Council will meet at 6 o'clock Thursday evening in the University Y. M. C. A. rooms in the Temple. The business meeting will be held from six to seven and the discussion group will meet from 7 to 8. All interested students are welcome at the discussion hour.

Organize Course for Washerwomen

A college course for washerwomen is being organized by the State University Extension Division in Massachusetts for the purpose of teaching skilled and scientific methods of modern laundry technique. The course, which is called the "Laundry Institute," is not only open to professional clothes washers but also to any women interested in making the family washing easier.

R. O. T. C. Promotions To Be Announced Soon

Promotion of senior cadet officers in the R. O. T. C. will be announced within two or three days, possibly Friday morning. The list is being held up in the executive dean's office because reports from last semester have not all come in. One major and several captains are to be chosen.

ORATORS IN HIGH SCHOOLS TO MEET

International and National Contests Sponsored by the Newspapers of United States

High school pupils will compete this year in national and international oratorical contests. The international contest, sponsored by 28 newspapers, is the first of its kind and the national contest is the third in the United States. The orators are limited to ten minutes on national subjects. The contests are open until February 1, to any pupil under 19 who is a student in any public, private, or parochial high school.

The prize for the seven winners in America will be a summer tour of Europe. The finalists will be determined by a series of elimination contests beginning April 2, within each high school.

The United States, France, England, Germany, and Mexico, have already announced that they will enter competitors in the international contest. This will consist of a series of independently organized contests, and the winners will meet several times during the summer and autumn.

The winners of the contests in each country will gather in the United States on October 19.

NEW MINERALS ARE ADDED TO DISPLAY

Robert Whitham Sends Rare Specimens for His Collection in Museum

Robert Whitham, of Los Angeles, has sent to the University museum several choice specimens to be added to his collection of minerals now included in the University's exhibits. The additions include specimens of chrysocolla and malachite from Arizona; a number of peridot crystals from the Lava Beds of Cahu Island, Hawaii; Thospsonite specimens from the Lake Superior region; tourmaline crystals and a large piece of quartz from San Diego county, California; amethysts from a new field in lower California and Mexico; crocidolite or "Tiger's Eye" rock from Capetown, South America.

Mr. Whitham's collection is now one of the most valuable exhibits in the museum and includes many exceptionally choice specimens of various minerals. In a letter accompanying his latest shipment, he states that he will be in Lincoln soon and will inspect the display which he has contributed.

PRACTICE ECONOMY (Indiana Daily Student)

College students would be doing well if they acquired among other good habits the trait of being economical. Probably there is no other word that Americans in general de-test so much, but in this day of the high cost of living, it can not be practiced any too much in its true meaning. One should be able to distinguish, however, between being economical and stingy for there is danger of the latter getting the best of a person.

It is for the college student's own good that economy should be practiced. In college a student often believes the world is waiting to receive him and that it owes him a living, and a good one at that. But it is not so. It is vastly different going to college on money from home than working for $20 or $25 a week with all one's expenses to pay. If a student has not learned economy before leaving college he is due for a rather rude awakening.

Theodore Roosevelt wisely said that thrift was simply the art of spending money wisely.

Edward W. Book in a magazine article said that few acts of conduct are so small that they go unnoticed and that few are so lowly and humble that the eyes of some one are not upon them. He was speaking of a certain young man, a friend of the son of the house, who always turned off every light when he left his room, and how punctilious he was in the little things about his room. The wife had mentioned these things to her husband, who said nothing. But when the young man was graduated from college he was asked to enter the business. It was the little things that counted.

It has been said if a man can be trusted with the little things he can be trusted in all things. There are too few persons who realize this and especially young persons. Being economical should not only apply to saving money, but one can be economical with time and other person's property. If all the time wasted were put to good advantage, only one's imagination can picture the results.

So get the habit of practicing economy. Some one may be watching you to see what you can do with the little things in life and whether you are capable of bigger responsibilities.
