To mountain climbers about to cross a plateau
 THIS is a thought for seniors about to set forth on the world's biggest climb—their careers.
 Educators tell us that mental growth, if diagrammed, would show a succession of mountains and plateaus. Progress in industry, too, has its plateaus—the periods when you seem merely to be marking time.
 But is it time lost? Older graduates, now executives in industry, say "No." They recall this as really a chance to find one's self, to get one's second wind for the next climb ahead.
 And they recall the fact that this whole journey, up the mountain and across the plain, is a great adventure with each man blazing his own trail, working out his own individuality in the various technical and commercial activities of modern business.
