HANDS UP!

"Because of the number of reservations that have already been made for parties, no action could be taken by the representatives of campus organizations who met Wednesday evening at the Temple. Decision to again consider the matter, and to set a student scale for ball rooms and other necessities for parties was made, however."—The Daily Nebraskan, October 2, 1925.

Almost exactly a year ago the above appeared in the editorial columns of this newspaper. At that time a campaign to lower the prices of dance halls and orchestras, very similar to the one being started now, was inaugurated and defeated as is seen in the paragraph above.

Similar drives to lower the prices of parties have been made and all with the same effect, that is in the last few years. Some four or five years ago an effective boycott brought the prices down to reason, but they have continually risen since then.

This year it is the dance orchestras that will have to be contended with more than the halls, but it is all practically the same. The orchestra prices have risen from 25 to 50 percent until they are almost prohibitive.

As it has been pointed out by the Student Council, with the small allowance given the sororities for their parties, it is practically impossible for them to arrange their entertainments this year.

The excuse given last year for the defeat of the campaign is the same thing that will be encountered this year, in fact it has already been encountered. The organizations have already arranged for their winter parties and most of the spring parties have also been scheduled. This is an obstacle that will have to be overcome if the prices are ever to be brought down for the same conditions will exist next year as are found this year.

There must be some way, however, to force these prices down. The person or organization which finds this way will be hailed as the campus hero or heroes. The relief may come through forcing the organizations to give up their parties or through hiring out-of-town orchestras or through a boycott for next year started now.

We are not prepared to say how this relief will come, unfortunately. But it will come in time. The public, even the University public, will not submit to being held up forever.

DAD'S DAY

On Saturday Nebraska Dads will be guests of the University. The University will be thrown open to them and they will be entertained in various ways, with the luncheon at the Chamber of Commerce, the Missouri-Nebraska football game in the afternoon, and other functions in the evening.

Copies of today's issue of The Daily Nebraskan will be available to the student body to be sent to the fathers with no expense to the sender.

This tradition gives the students an opportunity to show their gratitude to their fathers who are always eager to participate in the activities. After all it's Dad who pays the bills and most of us wouldn't be here if he didn't.

It takes very little time to sign up to have a copy of the Nebraskan sent home and to write a little note to Dad urging him to come down Saturday and he will appreciate it. Even if he can't come he will be glad to know that you thought to ask him and he will probably start planning now on coming next year.

THE PLAYERS

The sale of season tickets for the University Players productions started Monday to continue for three days. The announcement of an additional matinee performance of each production which is to be exclusively a student matinee is expected to increase the student attendance materially.

The University Players have been very successful in the past few years and have selected a number of good plays for this season, among them "Seventh Heaven," "Craig's Wife," "The Music Master," "Green Goddess," "White Collars," and "The Auctioneer."

The Temple Theater is the only place in Lincoln in which a definite season's program of worth-while plays is presented. It is to this theater that many citizens of Lincoln turn for their entertainment. It has been quite noticeable in the past that the patronage of this organization came mostly from the citizens of Lincoln instead of from the students, although it is primarily a University organization. The student matinee, the new feature of this season, should, however, prove that the students do appreciate and enjoy such art as is displayed by the Players.

WHO CARES?

Some time last week we questioned the advisability of eliminating stunts from between halves at the football games. At the time we expected to hear considerable comment on the question. One letter to the editor was received and printed.

Saturday there was no stunt between halves according to the decree of the athletic board. We thought that there would surely be some comment forthcoming after the game but so far nothing has been said within our hearing and no communications concerning the matter have been received. Evidently we were mistaken when we thought the stunts were popular. It seems that nobody cares whether they have them or not.

EDUCATION AND STARVATION
(Daily Palo Alto.)

"University presidents and Boards of Trustees have become blinded by our great American craze for mere size. A few million dollars donated to education means more buildings, more students, and more teachers, not better teaching by instructors who are paid sufficient salaries and allowed time for study and leisure," is the opinion of Frank Bohn in a late issue of The Forum, who breaks out with drastic measures suggested to rescue higher education and the starving professors.

It is an undisputed fact that first-class members of university faculties are rapidly deserting education for business, where their first year salary is from two to five times as large as the highest wages paid to professors. It is also a fact that one western state university boasts of the fact that it ministers to more than 40,000, while 15,000 of these are full time students.

However, when Bohn suggests that total registration in his "Utopia University" should never exceed 1,500, that the faculty should be three hundred members, and that the lowest paid member would receive $20,000—he is speculating many years ahead of our time. The idea is excellent, but it cannot possibly work under the economic situation of today and still continue our system of democratic education.

Should the universities be limited to the intellectually superior, or does the nation owe the very highest training possible to all of its citizens?

Whatever the answer to the question may be, an intelligent modification of expenses for university buildings and plant is possible. If buildings and equipment are limited to too great an extent, higher education will be open to even a smaller percentage of American youth. If more of this money was concentrated on the qualifications and salary of instructors, higher education in the United States might be more successful. Frank Bohn has given American citizens food for thought.

 forsaking the severe quadrangles of Oxford to become the personal sidekick of the Prince of Wales—and to tell the entire English Court what it should wear—
 he doubtless gained his first reputation for correct attire by appearing in a smart suit of 18th Century college clothes.
 Not that we wouldn't be the first to mob anyone who stepped out in a similar costume today—we like today's college styles a lot better; they seem simpler to move around in—but here's the point:
 When it comes to knowing styles, college men are still as far ahead of everyone else as they were in Brummel's day. They know the sort of thing they want to wear, and nothing else will do! That's why we offer them Society Brand college clothes—because these clothes are made strictly according to college men's ideas, carried out to perfection—to the last whisper.
