MANY WILL MAKE TRIP TO LAWRENCE

All Women Must Make Sleeper Reservations According To Dean Heppner

From all indications a large delegation of students will make the trip to Lawrence on the excursion next Friday. The Band, Corncocks, Varsity reserves, and the Freshman team will be on the special train.

Tickets may be purchased at the Student Activities office in the Coliseum, or at Latsch Brothers downtown. Students are urged to buy tickets as soon as possible, and by Thursday at the latest.

Women students desiring to go must buy standard sleeper tickets, which will cost more than the regular chair car rate of four dollars. This ruling was made by Dean Amanda Heppner.

The train will leave Lincoln at 11:30 o'clock Friday evening, and will reach Lawrence Sunday morning at 8:00 o'clock, on return.

There is also a rate of $4 from Lincoln to Kansas City and return with tickets good in coaches only, and will be honored on football special to Lawrence. The regular sleeping car rate will be $6.70 for the round trip to Lawrence or to Kansas City.

The rifle, number 730371, along with the belt, bayonet, and scabbard that are also missing, is valued at about $27. Colonel F. F. Jewett and Mr. F. A. Kidwell, military storekeeper, will greatly appreciate any information as to where it may be found.

PROOFS POSTED FOR DIRECTORY

Students Urged to Look Over Lists and Make Necessary Corrections

Students were crowding Social Science bulletin boards yesterday to correct directory proofs. All students should see at once if their names are included and their address and telephone number is correct. This is the only assurance against mistakes. The Directory staff is anxious to make it as complete and accurate as possible.

The proof is posted on bulletin boards in the hall of the Social Science building. It will have been completed through Z by Wednesday night and will be taken down by Friday. After the proof is withdrawn there is no chance of correcting a mistake. The proof from A to Gi was taken down Monday and that from Gi to Mi will be taken down Tuesday. If an address, telephone number, or other information is wrong, the student should correct it by writing the right information on one of the cards provided near and drop the correction in the proper box provided under the main bulletin board.

Lists Checked with Phone Directory

A careful check of telephone numbers with those of the telephone company is being made. This with the numerous corrections require considerable time to finish, but it is expected to have the book on sale by the latter part of next week.

The price of the Directory, fifty cents, is very low considering the effort to compile it and the amount of information contained in it. There are Faculty, Student, Fraternity, Sorority, and Hometown sections, and also a list of organizations and their presidents. If any organizations have had recent elections they are asked to get the results to Blanche Allen, 1527 M, telephone B6095 before Wednesday night.

Only Business Administration students are eligible to attend the banquet, but friends may be asked by the Business Administration members to attend the frolic. Ticket sales will start next week and a popular scale has been worked out. The Banquet alone will be one dollar and the dance will be one dollar also. However, by buying the two tickets together, a ticket admitting the member to the banquet and one couple to the frolic may be secured for $1.50 which makes a saving of fifty cents.

Each one will be given three minutes or five minutes will be given to those putting on a skit together. Additional information may be obtained by calling Ruth Clendener, President of the Club, or Herbert C. Morrison, one of the judges. Questions written out and left at the desk at the Temple building before Wednesday will be answered in the Nebraskan of that day.

Will Stage Several Plays

The club will stage several plays this year. The staging of plays is no the main object of the club, however, for it is to read and criticize current plays on the American stage. Each meeting night one person will lead the discussion on one of the late stage productions and in this way the members will broaden their outlook and become better acquainted with the drama of the day. The meetings will be held twice a month on Thursday nights.

Only twenty new members will be taken in this year thus cutting the number nearly in half. According to Herbert Morrison, it will be best for the aspirants not to try to give anything too heavy. They will stand a better chance if they present something that will not overtax their dramatic ability.

First-Year Squad Pointing for Coming Game with Kansas Aggie Freshmen November 6

Monday afternoon found the yearling pigskin pursuers entirely preoccupied with Kansas formations. Coach "Choppy" was demonstrating the plays as the Jayhawks executed them in their games with the Kaggies last Saturday.

Kansas formations feature a nine man line on the defense. A short running pass, Sloan to Farley, was also used extensively.

"Red" Ray appeared for a brief workout at tackle. He has been laid up for a week with a bad ankle sustained in a tangle with the Varsity.

"Bud" McBride called signals for the "A" team and Witte held down left half. Amus, formerly a center, showed up well at right guard.

Preparations for the contest with the Kansas Ag yearlings Nov. 6 are already under way, and the necessary fighting spirit is far from lacking. Better fitting equipment is being ordered for the regulars.

Rhodes had the following men on "A" team;

Jeffreys and Morgan, guards. Ray and Bushee, tackles. Toms and Lewandowski, ends. Case, center. Witte and Sloan, halves. McBride, quarter, and Farley, full. Rockefeller's Grandson Works Way Through Yale

MORLEY SPEAKS ON PRIMITIVE CIVILIZATIONS

Noted Archaeologist Gives Series of Lectures on Ancients

TALKS ON MAYA CULTURE

Speaker in Research Work in Central America For Some Years

Dr. Sylvanus G. Morley, noted archaeologist gave the last of a series of three lectures yesterday at 3 o'clock. He had spoken previously on Sunday and at 11 o'clock yesterday morning. The lectures dealt with the ancient Maya civilization. Dr. Morley has been supervising the archaeological project of Chichen Itza in Central America for several years. His talks deal principally with the discoveries made at this place or made by himself concerning the ancient culture of the Mayas. Slides picturing the clues to this civilization were used to illustrate the talks.

The topic of the address yesterday afternoon was "The Maya and Aztec Hieroglyphic Writing." Dr. Morley quoted H. G. Wells in opening his talk; "The truest measure of civilization is a system of writing." The system of the Maya is one of the oldest of the world. It ranks with the systems used by the Chinese and the Egyptians. As no definite records are available, it is difficult to say which is the most ancient. The system used by China and Egypt influenced the old world, while that of the Maya is the direct ancestor of all American forms of communication.

Four Sources of Information

There are four media by which archaeologists have learned of the ancient Maya civilization. The first of these is the monuments which have been unearthed from the ruins resulting from the Aztec conquest. They contain hieroglyphics which when translated are records of historical events, and astronomical observations. The second medium is the writing found on the old architecture, such as wall paintings and cornices. Then there are the hieroglyphic books—stone blocks upon which symbols are carved. The last medium and the one which has enabled the archaeologists to discover more of the history of the country than any other way are the records from Spanish invasions. The priests sent out by the Roman Catholic Church induced the Mayas to put their symbols in alphabetical form. The Spanish alphabet was used with the addition of two characters for sounds which were not used by the Spanish.

There are several stages in the development of writing. The most elementary form is picture writing. As the means of communication grows to where a symbol stands for a given thing, it is called ideographic. Phonetic is the final stage. In this classification falls all writing in which a symbol stands for the sound rather than the object. There are also two classes of phonetic writing, one in which the symbol may represent a syllable, and the alphabetical form as is used in the English language. The Maya writing is in the Ideographic stage, just verging over into the Phonetic stage, according to Dr. Morley.

Lectures Illustrated with Slides

The archaeologist then showed slides illustrating all that he had said, and pointing out the features of interest in the pictures. The ancient Mayas had styles in writing as we do today. Things done in the larger cities were always more advanced in the style of the day. For instance, variations of hieroglyphics meaning the same thing are a common occurrence.

The Maya chronology of time, stated Dr. Morley, is the most accurate ever used in the world. They computed their time, not by years, but by totals of days. The speaker gave a comparison of fifteen chronologies used since early times and the dates upon which the original year was fixed.

Finally, in closing the talk, Dr. Morley made several sketches of the way in which the Maya wrote numbers. The system used by them is very similar to the Roman method.

The lecture given Sunday afternoon was entitled "The Maya Civilization of the Old Empire."

"The Maya civilization of the Empire was the greatest and most brilliant aboriginal civilization of the New World," Dr. Morley stated.

"The origin of the higher civilization in the New World is closely connected with the development of corn which was the staple food of the earlier peoples," he continued. "There are two theories of the origin of corn, but the most tenable one of these maintains that corn has probably developed from a wild grass of South America, which is the only known plant whose pollen will fertilize corn. It is believed that this wild grass
