HUSKERS FACE STRONG TEAMS IS FORECAST

Results of Saturday Games Show Husker Slate Not Easy For Bearmen

ALL OPPONENTS VICTORS

Huskies, Aggies and New York University Whitewash Grid-Iron Foes Last Week

That the Nebraska Cornhuskers will have a tough time the rest of the season was forecast by results of games played Saturday. Two of the three teams that will appear on Nebraska field next month turned in performances that were more than impressive.

The Kansas Aggies, without resorting to their long suit, forward passes, downed the Kansas Jayhawkers, who the week previous had held the strong University of Wisconsin team to one touchdown and two field goals, by the impressive score of 27 to 0. Pre-season predictions were that the Aggies would be one of the tough ones this year, and it appears that the forecasters were right. The Aggies meet Nebraska at Lincoln November 13.

New York Defeats Tulane

New York University, coached by "Chick" Meahan, continued on its victorious rampage by defeating Tulane, 21 to 0. Tulane two weeks ago held Missouri to a scoreless tie. The Mechanics have scored three one-sided victories so far this year, Niagara and West Virginia Wesleyan having been defeated beneath a landslide of points in previous games.

Iowa State, which will oppose the Huskers at Lincoln October 30, played a scoreless tie with Grinnell Saturday.

The Washington Huskies of Seattle, Thanksgiving Day opponents of the Cornhuskers, scored a 28 to 0 victory over Idaho, and continued their march toward the Pacific Coast Championship.

Everyone is urged to be present at the time they sign up for as between two hundred and two hundred and fifty will be heard that evening and every minute will be crowded.

Mechanic Arts Building is But Half Finished According to Original Plans

A task well started is more than half done! This apparently was the belief of the builders of the Mechanic Arts building which is at present only half finished. This building though nearly twenty-eight years old comprises only half, or the north wing of the original plans for the structure.

Casual observations will show the finished architectural appearance of the north side of the present building, on which side it was originally intended to have the main entrance. The unfinished roughness of the south side is equally apparent, with a definite area remaining on which the south wing of the building was to be joined to the north, the completed structure to resemble an H.

Human Beings Seek Vicarious Thrill In Football, says Walter Woehlke

Why has football become such big business? Who are all these countless hordes rushing to the football games? In an article entitled, "This Football Business," for the November Sunset, Walter V. Woehlke, contributing editor, declares that we human beings turn to sports for a vicarious thrill. Because our cave ancestors lived in hourly fear of the prehistoric animals, they have passed on down to the present race of men habits responding immediately to exciting stimuli.

So through the feats of football players we are reproducing in ourselves all the excitement of the chase our ancestors felt.

Standard of Living Factor

"Not the least of the factors bringing people out to football is the rising American standard of living, the tremendous growth of the national income and its wider distribution. So long as a college education was a privilege reserved for a small number, a prerogative of the elect, just so long was football interest confined largely to the college group. Today an enormously broader section of the population is interested in everything pertaining to college life because this broad part of the population either is sending or expects to send its sons and daughters to the seats of learn-

ONLY MEN TO BE CHOSEN

Tryouts for the cast of the 1926 Kosmet Klub musical comedy, "The Dream Pirate," will be continued tonight at 7 o'clock in the Faculty Men's Club Rooms in the Temple. This will be the second night of tryouts and Klub members expressed the hope yesterday that they would be able to finish judging the aspirants tonight.

If they are not able to give each other a hearing tonight, however, another night will be set since the Klub has promised to give every student who desires to make the show a chance to display his wares.

The entire cast this year is to be made up of men. This offers opportunity to a large variety of types since the female parts must be taken by the men also.

Nearly 100 Tried Out

Nearly 100 men tried out before the Klub Monday night at the first tryout. Present registration indicates that as many or more will seek a hearing before the members tonight.

Although an unusual amount of talent was displayed Monday night, no characters have been picked as yet. Kosmet members avowed Tuesday. No one is assured of a place in the cast yet, and no selections will be made until the last man has tried out.

Students Asked to be Prepared

Those who are trying out for the chorus are asked to have some song prepared which they can sing, bringing the music for the accompanist to play if possible. They should also be prepared to do a few simple dance steps.

Those trying out for speaking parts should have some recitation or part in some previous production in mind which they can give. This is not absolutely necessary, however.

Registrations for tryouts will be open in Red Long's College Book store today and until 7 o'clock this evening. Those who are unable to register may appear at the Temple in the evening without signing up, although they cannot be sure of being heard immediately since those who have already signed up will be given the first chance.

George Washington Embarrassed As Speaker in Public, Book Reveals

That George Washington was agitated and embarrassed when addressing the public is one of the facts brought out by Professor J. D. Hicks, chairman of the department of history, in his speech Tuesday over radio as a part of the University Extension Department's program. The speech was the second of a series of lectures on the book "William Maclay and the Men of His Time."

Professor Hicks told of Maclay's interesting description of Washington. Maclay describes him as being "In stature about six feet, with an unexceptionable make, but lax appearance. His frame would seem to want filling up. His motions rather slow than lively, though he showed no signs of having suffered by gout or rheumatism. His complexion pale, nay, almost cadaverous. His voice hollow and indistinct, owing, as I believe, to artificial teeth before his upper jaw."

Maclay never found Washington appearing to great advantage when in public. On the occasion of the first in-

"The Bride of the Dragon King" is the title of the skit which will be given by members of the Grace Coppock staff at the convocation Thursday at 5 o'clock at the Temple especially for big and little sisters. Big and little sisters are urged to attend together, but all university women are invited.

Miss Ethel Hartley, who has spent four years in China, assisted Audrey Beales and Ethel Saxton in adapting this play, for use at this time. The play is taken from a recreational book, "Chinese Ginger" by Catherine Atkinson Miller.

After she was graduated from the University of Nebraska in 1917, Miss Hartley assisted Miss Alice Howell in the dramatic department for two years. In 1917 she went overseas to do Y. W. C. A. work among Chinese women. Four years later she returned and has since been taking graduate work here.

CHANGE MADE IN MILITARY CARNIVAL PLAN

City Police Department Rules Out Proposed Entertainment Features

NEW PROJECTS BEGUN

Arrangements Will Replace "Gambling" Devices Which Must be Eliminated

A change in the plans for the annual Military Carnival to be held in the Coliseum Saturday evening, November 13, has been made necessary because some of the proposed entertainment features do not meet with the approval of the city police department.

The chief of police has notified the general chairman that the "gambling" devices of various kinds that have been used in former years must be eliminated. It has been the custom to operate roulette wheels, blackjack games and similar games of chance using "phony" money as stakes. The police department has ruled that this practice violates one of the city ordinances and will have to be left out of the plans for this year's Carnival.

Definite plans are rapidly being formulated and will be announced as soon as completed. The dancing will be one of the features of the event and the music will be furnished by the best orchestra that can be obtained in this vicinity.

Committee Changes Made

Several changes have been made in the personnel of the committees working on the affair. The new committees as announced last night by John Boyer, general chairman, are as follows:

General committee: August Holmquist, chairman; Watson Foster, Leslie Brinkworth, Neil D. Adams, Ted Johnson.

Publicity: Horace W. Gomon, chairman; Edward Morrow, William Cejnar, Arthur Sweet.

Confetti and booths: John Whelpton, chairman; Fred Chase, Phil Sidles, Horace V. Noland.

Check room: Gordon Luikart, chairman; J. L. Toohy, Ira Brinkerhoff, Phil Scouler, Don Mattison.

Decorations: Arthur Breyer, chairman; John Murchison, Ralph Major, Harold Zipp.

Police: Judd Crocker, chairman; Simpson Morton, K. H. Eddy, C. E. Rogers.

Indian Costumes Lend Frontier Days' Atmosphere to Omaha Reservation

Miss Martha M. Turner, of the State Historical Society, recently returned from a visit among the Indians on the Omaha Reservation in Thurston County, Nebraska, where she has been gathering a collection of photographs and interesting material in the way of Omaha Indian traditions and customs.

The reservation, which covers a space about twenty-four miles square, resembles the ordinary small Western town. There is an atmosphere of frontier days effected probably by the costumes of the older Indians who, if they do not cling to their Indian blankets, dress in the style typical of pioneer days.

Although many of the reservation Indians are industrious and keep up their farms (with the aid of their wives) a great many are content to lead a simple life philosophizing and recalling the past on street corners. Evidence of this is noticed in the fact that a great deal of the reservation is now owned by white people who have obtained it through mortgages.

In a few instances the Indians cling to the old customs of former days. The papooses are still strapped to a board and carried on the backs of their mothers. Also the young boys are given the four-day test of hunger and exposure on top of a hill. Although the life of the adult Indian is comparatively easy and uneventful nowadays, they still adhere to this ancient test.

Evidences of the Indian's old religious beliefs have almost entirely disappeared, except for their weird ceremonial dances, in which they indulge frequently in the summer and fall. In these dances both men and women take part, but the principal dances are executed by men in full costume. At these times the men take advantage of the occasion to realize their suppressed love of personal adornment and color by wearing all the elaborate regalia of their forefathers, and even tying on the cherished braids that were cut off during the war. It is probably by means of these dances that the once fierce Indian, who is now reconciled to living the quiet and law abiding life of the reservation, can express the difference between himself and the progressive white man.
