WOMEN'S ATHLETICS
 With the exception of telegraphic rifle meets, Nebraska women do not engage in intercollegiate athletics at all, and the question has arisen as to why this is true.

There are, it is true, advantages which might be gained from intercollegiate sports for women, namely; that in keeping training rules they would acquire vastly beneficial habits of hygienic living; that contact with strangers as their guests or their hostesses would bring training in social values and a broadening of experience; that alertness, initiative, clear thinking, decisiveness, self-discipline, and better muscular control would be brought about through greater interest in the sport than could be excited through home activities.

But these advantages are more than overwhelmed by the disadvantages of a policy of intercollegiate sports for women. Women are not physically built to withstand the strain of the intercollegiate game. There is likely to be more "physical straining than physical training," showing most perhaps in nerve fatigue and emotional strain. The idea to win at any cost is bound to creep in and to displace the finer one of "play for play's sake."

Also it seems impossible that the "many" would not suffer for the "few". No school—and especially not Nebraska—has a sufficient staff and equipment to turn out varsity teams for the various sports of the year, and at the same time to carry out a correct program of physical education for the remaining University women. The many women taking physical education, yet not able or willing to take active part in intercollegiate sports would be almost sure to suffer because the funds spent on intercollegiate teams must be subtracted from the general funds of the department.

The men of the University of Nebraska get their compulsory physical education from military training, financed by the government even to the providing of uniforms, equipment, instructors, the paying of the advanced cadets and giving to the University some seventy-five thousands of dollars. Nebraska men take up intercollegiate sports entirely outside of the department for compulsory physical education. Until the physical education of women in the university is in some way provided for in addition to its present appropriation we can not even think of turning a large part of the funds that preparation of intercollegiate teams.

FRATERNITY LAXNESS
 It would seem that many of the fraternities in the university of Nebraska are dead, or at least quite inactive in matters that vitally concern them. This is the conclusion reached by Dr. R. J. Pool, who is chairman of the local Interfraternity Council. On the eighth of October he sent notices to all of the fraternities with the request that they send him the names of the men who would represent them as members of the Council for the present school year. To date he has received responses from only fourteen of the thirty-seven fraternities represented on the campus. About half of the data sent in is of little value because of the lack of addresses and other uncertainties.

From these facts it seems that the fraternities in this school are little or not at all concerned with their own affairs, since the Interfraternity Council was organized many years ago for the sole purpose of dealing with fraternity matters in which it was supposed that the fraternities were interested. The Council has the backing of the Chancellor and the Board of Regents.

In spite of the fact that there are pressing matters that should be considered at once for the benefit of the fraternities, the chairman has not (after a month) received sufficient response to his request for nomination of members of the council to enable him to call a meeting. It has been reported that fifty-six men in twenty-six fraternities are now on probation. The recently created Executive Committee of the Council will be required to act upon these cases if the active men of the various fraternities are not sufficiently interested in their affairs to send in the names of the men who are to represent them on the Council for the current school year.

THE FRESHMAN GAME

Next Saturday afternoon, instead of the regular varsity game, the freshmen football teams of Kansas Agricultural College and the University of Nebraska will meet to determine the first-year supremacy of the two institutions. This is a new practice here and it is undoubtedly a good move for creating interest in the freshman football team. Although the freshmen and the varsity play their customary game in the fall before all who wish to attend, the remainder of the freshman season usually consists of hard, grinding practice, with little of the fanfare that attends a varsity game.

These freshmen are the Cornhuskers of next year and deserve the support of the student body, especially members of the freshman class. Encourage them now and they will repay you in the future. Show them that the whole school is interested in freshman football and appreciates the spirit that makes the yearlings stay out for a season of battering by the varsity.

The yearling squad this fall is a well-balanced and well-coached aggregation with a heavy line and a set of backs that frequently scores against the varsity. The coming game assumes all the aspects of a varsity encounter, with the rivalry running as high, if not higher. It is the one big chance for the freshmen to show their ability and they are certain to do so. Future yearling games depend a great deal on the success of this one and it is therefore up to the student body to show the first year men their interest and appreciation.

The Forum Replies

To the Editor:
 Our attention has been called to the Student Opinion written by V. W. T. which appeared in the Nebraskan on November 2. In this article V. W. T. attacks the World Forum committee of the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. for their lack of courage; and to prove this he cites the lone illustration of Sunday Movies. This subject had been suggested for discussion but "when brought up in committee meeting, ... was stepped on."

While, in general, we do not admit responsibility to any student for our program and our reasons for accepting or rejecting any particular subject this case seems exceptional and calls for immediate answer. When it is remembered that we are among the "pussyfoot individuals" attacked by V. W. T. it seems fitting that we make the reply.

Some cynical individuals may be inclined to view the whole squabble as merely another publicity hoax, somewhat like the recent Cornhusker stunt with which we are all familiar, which has been embarked upon to bring the glorious past (referred to by V. W. T. as "the good old days") in comparison with the present; thus shows. Moreover, there seemed to be no effective argumentation on either side of the question and there seemed to be an amazing lack of competent speakers on the thing.

 For these reasons the subject of Sunday shows did not appear to be desirable and we replaced with the series on "the Bases of Religion". This, in spite of V. W. T.'s evidence to the contrary, has been quite successful, a large percentage of those coming remaining for the question hour. If V. W. T. would come out to a meeting this year he might be agreeably surprised at the resemblance it bears to old times.

In conclusion we can only say that V. W. T.'s views seem to be based upon a mistaken understanding of the World Forum's purpose and the points which we consider in the choosing of a subject. There is one thing which we will attempt to avoid, however, and that is the using of the World Forum as an agent for propaganda; a charge which all the organs of expressing student opinion have not been free in the past few years.

In this we are not without precedent for The Daily Nebraskan last year refused to take any stand on Military Training. The World Forum has not turned Yellow; the committee welcomes suggestions and if we are convinced of their universal appeal will gladly discuss them.

The Forum's Purpose
 To the Editor:
 The purpose of the World Forum, as stated in the "N" book is to furnish a place for discussion of issues upon which the students are, or should be, interested. It is apparent, of course, that all of the subjects upon which the students are, or should be thinking, cannot be discussed in one hour each week. Therefore the purpose of the World Forum committee is to make a selection of subjects according to its judgment.

In regard to the specific charge made against the committee because the question of Sunday Movies was not discussed we would like to state that which is apparent—namely that we felt the students would be more interested in a question in which they could take part. As probably no more than 5 per cent of the student body could vote on a city issue, we discarded Sunday Movies as one of the topics of present day interest which
