said, are in position to give character training and sharpening of the mind of the younger people. Therefore, they cannot be narrow minded. They must keep in touch with the changing world, in order to preserve the ideals which the pioneers of this state have set. "Our valiant pioneers, who, themselves, may have lacked in education, were wise in seeing that it was available for those who were to follow them."
Cameron T. Beck on Program
Cameron T. Beck was the last speaker of the morning. His theme was "The Cost of Leadership." He has charge of aiding the men working in the stock exchange to get a good education.
"A ruling has been adopted in recent years that a boy short in secondary education cannot remain on the payroll unless he continues his education. We endeavor to give to these young people human sympathy backed by the finest motives." Mr. Beck admonished the teachers, "If you do not give yourself, all that you have is a job and not a calling."
Elliott Heard at Evening Session
The principal speaker of the evening program was Dr. Edward C. Elliott, president of Purdue University. His subject was "Schools and Building of Character."
"Within the classrooms of the American public school system," he stated, "all the way from the one-room rural school through the lecture rooms and the laboratories of the metropolitan university, the most important contest in the world today is going on,—the contest for the possession and the control of superior human ability. Whatever our American democracy may become during the next and the coming generations will be determined by that group or class that succeeds in winning the larger share of men and women of capacity."
Mr. Elliott asked the question—Who is to control the world, educated men with power or powerful men without education?
Lists Key Words of Civilization
"The prime business of American education is to charge the great control words of life with that kind of truth which ordinary men and women can understand and practice." The speaker listed the key words of civilization as Health, Self-Control, Raveerence, Cheerfulness, Honesty, Freedom, Loyalty, Courage, Tolerance, Industry, Waste, Good Workmanship, Reliability, Success, Confidence, Sportsmanship and Team Work.
"The decisive battles of civilization are to be fought over what these words mean to Americans. Only that education which results in the deepening and strengthening of the feelings of mutual trust and confidence among men is worthy of the support and service of a free people."

which you have forgotten to ask."
Discusses Many Writers
Tolstoi, Turgenev, Meredith, Hardy, Powells, James, and Conrad, have the courage to face life as it is, Dr. Stuff declared. They put the sinews of life into fiction. By dramatic investiture, by implication, they heighten the reader's sense of reality and enable him to become conscious of human values. They make him feel the solidarity of life by disclosing the developing physical nature from which proceeds the illuminating light of an evolving and humanizing culture.

WILL NOT BE CHANGED
Harvard authorities have definitely decided to retain Princeton on their football schedule for 1927, and have withdrawn the proposal which would replace the Tiger eleven with the University of Michigan. This announcement was made following a meeting of the chairman of athletics of the "Big Three" colleges held in New Haven. By this action the "Big Three" in football will remain for another year, at least.
