FLING CHOSEN FOR COMMITTEE

Will Serve as Executive Secretary on State Endowment Committee

GROUPS IN EACH STATE

Prof. Fred M. Fling of the University of Nebraska has been appointed executive-secretary of a Nebraska State Committee which is being formed to aid the American Historical Association in raising an endowment of $1,000,000 to promote "American history and history in America", it has been announced by former Senator Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana, chairman of the Association's National Endowment Committee.

Organization of committees to obtain the endowment has been completed in practically every state. A New York City Committee has been formed with former Secretary of State Charles E. Hughes at its head. Several state governors are acting as chairmen, and are working with scholars and business and professional leaders.

"At the close of the late war the representatives of the contending nations met to arrange the terms of peace," says a statement sent throughout the country by the Association in appealing for support. "The last and in some respects the most important mobilization of the vast struggle then occurred.

Historians at Peace Conference
 "In this unprecedented mobilization of scholars of the world the historian took first place. His specialized knowledge of the peoples dealt with, derived from a study of their development, made him the best equipped person to advise concerning the momentous problems, social, political, and economic, that waited solution.

"The necessity of the historical approach was universally recognized. Only through the medium of history can the man of today make a true appraisal of existing institutions and build the future on stable foundations.

"Dedicated to the promotion of 'American history, and of history in America,' the American Historical Association has since its foundation forty-two years ago proved a most efficient agency in directing and co-

Luncheon Ticket Sale Will End on Wednesday

The last chance to buy tickets for the Girls' Cornhusker Luncheon to be held Saturday at noon in the Coliseum will be Wednesday evening. The ticket sale will close on Wednesday instead of Thursday as formerly announced because of Armistice Day vacation on Thursday. No tickets will be sold at the door.

The members of Mystic Fish, freshmen women's honorary organization, are taking charge of the sale in the various houses and tickets are also on sale at Long's Book store.

Accommodations will be possible for any number that wish to attend and all sororities are being asked to make arrangements for the attendance of their alumnae, and Manhattan visitors.

Ruth Barker and Grace Elizabeth Evans are in general charge of the ticket sale with Irene Bailey as chairman at the Agricultural college campus.

ordinating historical interests throughout the United States.

Roosevelt and Wilson Former Heads
 "Among those who have assumed the presidency of this Association and have served its high cause with distinction are two presidents of the United States—Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson—and such outstanding men as Andrew D. White, George Bancroft, James B. Angell, Henry Adams, George F. Hoar, Charles Francis Adams, Henry Charles Lea, George Burton Adams, William A. Dunning, and H. Morse Stephens.

"Through its publication and the work of its committees, the Association has been during the past forty years a notable influence in promoting better history, better teaching, and better citizenship.

Asks Million Dollar Endowment
 "Against this rich background the American Historical Association now proposes to extend its work and influence. It asks the general public for a one million dollar endowment in order that the Association may continue and enlarge its national services and not be faced in this era of the depleted dollar with serious curtailment of its work.

"Adequate endowment will mean more effective organization of historical research, the study of the backgrounds of matters of wide public interest such as immigration and sectionalism, an approach to our legal, economic, and social problems that will carry us beyond a mere surface study.

"On the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the achievement of our national independence, the American Historical Association presents a program of far-reaching importance, firm in the belief that loyalty to our cherished traditions, respect for our institutions, and a deep sense of obligation to the future will bring the needed million dollar endowment fund in the enduring interest of 'American history, and of history in America.'

Politics Plays Big Part on College Campuses at this Season of the Year

New York (by New Student Service)—While the voice of the politician is heard throughout the land, the campus statesman's voice is no less audible on many a college campus. Student councilors are being asked in the colleges, as well as class officers, and the season of bickering and deals is on.

At the University of Kansas football players who are also candidates for offices played at political intrigue so vigorously that they neglected the more muscular game and caused their university to lose. In fact, it is said that political factions split the football team asunder and rendered it impotent on the field. At least such is the charge of Chancellor Lindley who rebuked the athletic politicians publicly at convocation.

Shortly afterward the football men withdrew their candidacies, by request of Coach F. C. Cappel. As a result there will be no attempt to hold election until football season is over.

As usual there is much talk of cliques and combines. The Boston University News frankly admits their existence:

"The fact that clique politics exists cannot be denied. If one fraternity is not strong enough to swing the whole election, it combines with one or two others of the same strength, and these, sometimes by affiliating with one or two non-fraternity men, manage to control the entire workings of a class or organization. And once the clique gets in control it runs affairs to suit itself, behind closed doors which bear the sign, 'No admission.'"

The News is in favor of a benevolent despotism. Its editorial concludes: "It is far better that the clique run things to suit itself, for if every member of the class was to be consulted on everything the organization would collapse and nothing would be accomplished. If a clique can run the affairs of the class in a smooth manner it is to be given a vote of thanks and not censured for its lack of Democracy. We favor clique politics because (1) it is more efficient; (2) it is inevitable, and (3) it gives us something to talk about."

At Ohio State University the usual groups are conspiring for the senior class presidency. Hitherto this has been done in secret. This year one of the groups comes forward with the suggestion that the fraternities implicated declare their combines openly and unashamedly: "The pre-election stand of this combination is honest and clean open publication of political combines and their principles rather than the underhand, subrosa methods that have prevailed in former years. That these campus political combines exist is a well known fact, and this combine feels that the 'above board' publication of the political situation is the only honorable method of handling this problem for the best interest of all candidates, refusal to publish well-concerned.

"In the opinion of this group of recognized combinations can mean only one thing, namely, underhandness."

Washington University Championship Swimming Team Drills for Season

St. Louis, Nov. 8. The swimming squad of Washington University, holder of the Missouri Valley Conference championship, began practice here this week for another drive toward the Valley tank title. The natators will work out daily in Wilson pool until the Conference meeting nearly six months ahead. They will engage in a number of dual engagements in preparation for the important title contest.

Coach A. E. Bilers announced after a preliminary survey of the material in hand that prospects for a repetition of the championship were extremely bright. All but three of the lettermen will return, among them several holders of Valley marks as well as first place winners in last year's swim tourney. Among the swimmers will be Capt. Roland Baer national junior 220-yard free style champion. Baer is also a record backstroke.
