Bradford Discusses Service of Ag College
a great enterprise, homemaking. No one will say today that the wife and mother in a home will get along just as well without special training. Many a home has been short of happiness because the girl wife had never learned those fine points which bring order and beauty into the four walls of a house where a family eats and sleeps.
He then told of the transformation of the farm home at a small expense. The trained farm girl makes the walls and rugs harmonize. Pictures, dinners, and dress of excellent taste all home made show that young girls from college bring desirable results. The work of the high school vocational agricultural instructor and the county agent were described in relation to helping the state. Both are Agricultural College graduates. The department of vocational agriculture head is guiding from twenty-five to fifty boys who want to learn more about larger crops, better livestock and more efficient farm management. In most cases this agricultural instructor comes in touch with all the farmers of his vicinity as he visits the home projects of his boys.
County Agent Helps
"In the court house is the county agent and his flivver is on the road every day when the agent is rendering service to farmers. He does not pretend to know it all just because he is an agricultural college man. But he does know how to find the answer when some farmer presents him with a knotty problem. This agricultural college graduate makes himself useful in a thousand different ways."
"The young woman too, will be found in the high school as a teacher of home economics, in the hospital as a dietitian, in the cafeteria as manager and in many other lines of work where she may use the education furnished her by the Agricultural College. We call it 'passing on the service' to others."
Professor Bradford then told of the helpful work of the research carried on by the experiment station. He mentioned the help in preventing hog cholera, a serious menace to agriculture. The new strains of wheat and oats needed more drought and rust resistant and that is usually solved.
Carry Work to Farmers
"The Agricultural Extension Service carries the work of the experiment station to the farmers. Specialists are in the field all the time arranging cooperative demonstrations on farms, speaking to groups of farmers and attempting to solve specific problems in certain localities. The county agent is a part of the extension service. More than forty of these agents are employed in Nebraska Counties.
"We think of the Nebraska Agricultural College as a service institution. It gives to the state trained men and women. It adds dollars to the state's net income through its studies and discoveries. Its interest is in better condition for the farmer, better crops, and live stock, better incomes and better homes. Nebraska's chief industry is agriculture and the institution which assists in raising agricultural standards is serving the state as a whole."

WOMEN TO START SOCCER PRACTICE
Famous English Sport Will Begin for Co-eds When Hockey Season Ends
Practice for soccer will begin immediately after the Hockey tournament is over. Hazel Snively, manager of the sport has arranged that instruction be given to beginners as well as to advanced players. The Executive Board of the Woman's Athletic association will recommend at the general meeting that soccer be made a minor sport, and that the tournament may be run off before the Christmas holidays. Five practices are required for tournament eligibility in a minor sport.
Soccer, an English favorite, is rapidly becoming popular among American co-eds. It has been played at Nebraska for five years and adapts itself readily as a between-season sport. Sweaters, gloves and goshes can be worn without decreasing the enjoyment of playing.
Anyone wishing further information about the game may go to the W. A. A. office in the Armory. Watch the bulletin board for the exact date of beginning practices.

"Stop Everett" Is Cry Heard At Iowa State
Ames, Iowa, Nov. 9.—Special: "Stop Everett" is the war cry around State gymnasium as Coach Noel Workman starts the heavy work outs for the Cyclones' homecoming tilt with Drake Saturday.
From the Iowa State point of view the clash with the Bulldogs is the most important on the schedule. Intensive work on defensive will constitute this week's final preparations, last week's vacation being taken up with new plays and work on a scoring offense.
"Tiny" Grimes is again back at tackle and is alternating with Hal-loway Smith. Ernie Anderson and Johnson are working at Grimes' former position and also will alternate against Drake according to present indications. Johnson, who has been out of the lineup for the entire season due to leg injuries, is counted a valuable asset at end.
Starting in 1898 Iowa State has humbled the Bulldogs 19 times, lost five games and tied one, 0 to 0, in
