THE RED HERRING

Now and then one sees a freshman who has come to school with the idea of getting an education. He holds the old-fashioned idea that knowledge of philosophy, history, mathematics, science, or some other subject, may be valuable for its own sake. He is not particularly seeking the secrets of some particular craft in order to battle the world more successfully. He simply has the idea that it is worth while to be educated.

Many of the freshmen are pledged by the fraternities, and thereby usually ruined for scholarship. Their attention is turned from study to dates and activities. But occasionally one does go through with his original purpose. He emerges with some background; he is not educated, to be sure, but he has the beginning.

Most freshmen never get so far as to think of being educated. They come to school because they wish to be collegiate, because friends came, or because they have heard of the cash value of four years in the culture-mill.

They therefore avoid all courses that savour of scholarship and seek those that can be at some time turned into dollars and cents. Or they are so engrossed in social and school activities that they have no time for the "practical" courses.

There is, of course, a place in every university for specialized non-cultural subjects. They are necessary; every country must have doctors, engineers, business men, and even lawyers. But this technical training will not suffice when the problems of life confront the graduate. And with a shallow training he is likely to crack under the first difficulty.

One may regard literature as impractical, but what greater joy can a man have than in good reading? One may deride philosophy as worthless, but training in abstract thinking and the formation of a philosophy of life are surely not unimportant? One may be bored with science, but can one regard the life of Pasteur as dull?

The lives of men who read nothing and who think little outside their financial interests are tragic. If one doubts that, he may look into the lives of those moderately successful men (financially) who scurry from place to place in search of happiness and contentment.

Education is not to be overlooked. The student will not be educated in college, of course; but he can make the start. And the one who fails to do so will lack in true happiness, even if he owns a Packard and belongs to the Country Club.

THE BAND'S WORK

Some short time ago we deemed it necessary to compliment the ROTC band on its services to the University and the responsibility which it shoulders. We suggested that the student body work for the band as it works for the school. Further, we urged students to show in some way their appreciation for the work of the band.

Members of the band are, this week, canvassing the campus in a ticket sale drive to produce the wherewithal to send part of their number along with the Cornhuskers on the Burlington special that will head out of Lincoln Saturday night for Seattle. The plan of the band is to put on a benefit dance in the Coliseum Saturday night of this week, the proceeds of which will be used to send the bandmen to Seattle.

If the party is a financial success the band will accompany the team. If the party is a failure it will snell two things: the band cannot accompany the representatives of the Scarlet and Cream, and it will prove to the band that the student body as a whole is not behind the band and does not appreciate its work.

The band is not asking for a donation. It merely asks you to support it by attending the party Saturday night. It is a business proposition and not a begging bee. The committee declares that the party will be the best that Nebraska has ever known. Coaches and athletes on the Nebraska football team all have expressed the wish that the students might get behind this movement and send the band to Seattle.

The students should all go to the benefit dance tomorrow night. The band has made it easy for the students to get out and solicit

HELP WANTED

On next Saturday will be held the annual freshman-sophomore Olympics. This occasion will decide the supremacy of either the sophomore or the freshman class. Perhaps the women of these two classes do not know that they have a chance to help win the contest. They may win points just the same as the men, and they may be the determining factor in the success of their class.

The Olympics is a contest which has been in existence for many years; one in which each class makes a real effort to win. It is certain that the men of each class will be there doing their utmost, but it is a question concerning the women.

In the contest it is possible for one class to win one hundred points. Five of these are for the class having the greatest number of women present. Here is the chance for the women. These five points represent one-twentieth of the total possible points, but five points may be a determining factor.

It must be admitted that it is more to the advantage of the freshmen men to win the contest than to the women. The women have no green caps which they wish to discard.

We hope to see a large representation of women from both classes next Saturday.

Regents Have Full Control Of University

of Regents is almost entirely responsible for the University. One point often overlooked by people dissatisfied with some University policy is that a Regent individually has no power. All power given to the Regents is vested in them collectively as the Board of Regents. The only exception to this would be in case the Board of Regents itself delegated particular powers to one of its members, in which case he would be acting as an agent of the Board of Regents rather than as a Regent.

Chancellor Responsible to Regents
 Directly responsible to the Board of Regents is the Chancellor. He is the chief administrative officer for both business and educational functions of the University. The other officers and all professors, instructors, etc., are responsible either directly or indirectly to the Chancellor. Thus, the finance secretary and the operating superintendent, responsible to the Chancellor, direct the business affairs of the University. On the educational side, affairs are directed by the dean of men, the dean of women, the deans of the colleges, and the registrar, all responsible directly to the Chancellor.

The University organization is flexible. Offices are built around the personalities on the campus and individuals' talents are used to the best advantage instead of trying to fit individuals into type-form offices. Responsibility for the University falls directly on the Regents and the success of the University is dependent upon their success in securing and retaining capable, sincere, and vigorous personalities in the University. There are certain fundamental administrative offices which handle delegated powers which are relatively continuous. In succeeding articles we shall discuss the functions and duties of these officers, showing in more detail how much of the necessary administration of the University is carried on.

Fifty Per Cent Self-Supporting

More than fifty per cent of the University of Idaho students are partially self supporting, according to results of a survey completed, at the end of the last college year. Returns from the survey showed that 550 students were entirely self supporting while 311 earned part of their expenses.

Moves Columns at Washington
 When the University of Washington was moved to a new location four columns from the main hall were moved to the new campus. These columns symbolize Loyalty, Industry, Faith and Efficiency. Each year the incoming freshmen ceremoniously gather about them and pledge their allegiance to the university in an Epehebic oath.

—but why choose your life-work that way?
 YOU'D laugh at a man who couldn't make up his mind which colors to back. But isn't that about the way a good many men start out on their careers?
 All through college the most important study a man can select is himself—to find out by self-analysis and experience what is his particular aptitude and what work he should get into after college.
 It's a good rule to talk this over with the faculty and with men out in industry to get all the guidance you can in "finding yourself"—because your whole happiness and effectiveness in your career is at stake.
