Huskers Trounce New York Gridmen

they seized the opportunity to make a touchdown on a sudden break of the game. The game had been in progress long enough for the players' fingers to become numb and for the ball to acquire a slippery, icy surface. Howell had charged through for a yard when the ball slipped from his grasp and bounded into the arms of Connor who raced sixty-nine yards through an open field for a touchdown. Strong place-kicked the extra point. The only other bid for a New York score was made in the second quarter when Strong attempted a place kick from the 16-yard line. The effort was blocked and Presnell recovered the ball and ran to the Nebraska 38-yard line before he was forced out of bounds. Stephens punted and the New York squad was pushed out of scoring territory.

Nebraska's chance to even matters came a few minutes later when Presnell returned Strong's punt to the New York 23-yard line in a sprint which was the sensational run of the game. He reversed the field and stiff-armed his way through most of the opposition. Stephens ploughed his way to the 9-yard line and Howell took the ball over for a touchdown. Stephens' place-kick for the extra point fell short.

Stephens PlaceKicks

Stephens' place-kick came in the third quarter after he placed the team in scoring territory with a twenty-yard return on a punt. Line plunges by Howell and Presnell brought the ball to the fourteen-yard line where Stephens dropped back and booted a place-kick for three points. Stephens threatened to score by place-kicks four other times but his attempts were from deep in his territory and they fell short.

The last scoring play was completed in the last few minutes of the game when Stephens took the ball over after Nebraska had recovered a New York fumble on the visitors' eighteen-yard line and had marched down to the goal-line by line plunges.

Snow Falls Constantly

The game was played under the most adverse weather conditions of the season. Snow fell throughout the struggle and the officials were kept busy picking up water-soaked cotton gloves discarded by the players. Seeking protection from the stiff north wind that swept through the stadium the spectators were huddled under blankets of every description.

Miss Edna Benson, instructor in Home Economics and a former member of Faculty Advisory Board for Farmer's Fair, spoke on "What a Farmer's Fair Should Be".

L. A. Townsend, the manager of the first Farmer's Fair ever held on the Ag College Campus, told of this fair. Students of the college also presented a skit which represented a "dead" Farmer's Fair being revived by College Spirit and Farmer's Fair Board.

The new Student Activities Building on Ag Campus will be available for the Farmer's Fair next spring with this increased facility, the new board is expecting the largest fair in history.

Ag College Will Hold First Formal Dancing Party on December 4

The first formal dance of the Agriculture College at Nebraska will be held on the night of December 4. This is a new idea on the "Ag" campus and the students are extremely interested in making it a success, hoping it will become an annual affair.

Everyone is required to wear overalls and aprons; nobody will be admitted who does not appear in this kind of "formal dress".

Plans are nearing completion and a discussion meeting of all committees was held Thursday night. Arrangements for special music has been made and tickets will soon be on sale. All "Ag" students are permitted to bring one friend.

With the organization of the A. S. U. W. news service, complete plans have been made to keep the state of Washington and the Pacific Coast fully informed on university activities.

Pound Asked To Speak At National Meeting

Miss Louise Pound of the department of English has received an invitation to address the phonetic section of the meeting of the National Association of Teachers of Speech, to be held at Chicago during the holidays. Because of conflicting programs Miss Pound cannot accept the invitation.

Americans have little realization of the change that is developing in higher education in Great Britain. It is usually thought of over here as a privilege really open only to the upper classes and that university is synonymous with "Oxford" or "Cambridge".

Every student is more or less interested in the discussion in regard to the proper use of Alumnus. The decision to use "Alums" fits our case perfectly, because we want everyone to be benefited by a near visit to the wonderful Educational Foreign Exhibit of Gift & Art Novelties at George's Shop—Prices range from twenty-five cents to fifty dollars. You have sure not been fair to your friends if you let them get into the city without a visit to this wonderland—Party favors, Noise Makers, Menus, Programs, Christmas Cards, and hundreds of regular items are shown in startling designs. Our salespeople are trained to help you. George's Rah Rah Shop, 1213 N.—Adv.

FAIR BOARD FOR 1927 IS CHOSEN

Six Students Selected for Junior Farmers' Advisory Committee; Benson Speaks at Meeting

The students of Ag College met in convocation in Ag Hall Thursday morning to hear the announcement of the Junior Farmers Fair Advisory Board members and to learn about the plans for the 1927 Farmers Fair. L. L. Wilson, manager of the Farmer's Fair Board presided over the meeting. Lawrence C. Jones, another member of the board announced a
