It was the women's turn yesterday to tell what they think about tag dances at the Varsity Parties and they seem to be unanimous in favor of them. At least all of the twenty-two interviewed by the "Inquiring Reporter" were in favor and most of them emphatically.

Most of the answers, naturally, were of a frivolous nature and only one or two seemed to get the point that the tag dances were instituted to help encourage a democratic feeling among the members of the student body instead of just so that the girls can dance with more fellows.

Despite such remarks as "I like the excitement," "It helps you out," and others, the Varsity Party Committee should feel encouraged at the replies and should by all means continue the practice in the future. One poor misguided young lady was afraid it was hard on the fellows. Hard on the fellows! It seems to us that it's the women who have to suffer if any one does for under the tag system they dance all the time. However, they seem to like it, at least twenty-two of them do, so the dances don't seem to be working a hardship on anyone. But please save your pity for the men, they are indeed lucky not to have to dance all evening.

If tagging is successful at Varsity Parties, and it seems that it is, why not continue the practice to our other University functions? Our quaint old-fashioned parties, especially the formal ones, need something done to them. Maybe it's the inauguration of tagging that they need, maybe not. It's time to try something.

Knute Rockne stirred the state of Nebraska a day or two ago when he said in an interview in Kansas City that he would favor the return of the Notre Dame-Nebraska gridiron classic. A statement, said to come from our athletic department, followed his interview in which it was said that no official word from Notre Dame had been received and that due to the fact that our schedule is practically complete, it was highly improbable that a game with Notre Dame would be scheduled for 1927.

It is all very well to hold our head up and say that it is Notre Dame's first move and that our schedule is nearly filled, but if Notre Dame should offer Nebraska a game and it would not be accepted, the entire state of Nebraska would rise as one man in protest. We want that game and there is no use pretending we don't.

We are also grateful to Mr. Rockne for saying that it was not the fault of the University that relations were severed but the fault of the townspeople. Will the Omaha Bee and other well-meaning but misinformed newspapers kindly take note and quit their infernal harping on the folly of youth and razzing the Corn Cobs and the students for causing the break between the two schools.

A reply from the president of the Tassels, an organization which we criticized recently, is printed in the "Other Opinions" column today. We are informed that our attitude is ungraceful, that we have no gratitude, that we are not the possessor of an observant eye, and that we have no taste. We are grateful to the Tassels, not only because they replied to our remarks, but also because they didn't say anything worse than that about us. Whether or not they were right is for the women who attended the banquet to decide.

With the close of the football season, our athletic interests naturally turn to basketball. This season should be the most popular one in Cornhusker history since all of the games will be played in the Coliseum for the first time. Last year found an increased interest in the sport, with only part of the games played in the Coliseum where temporary bleachers were erected. This year, with the building completed, should be a banner year, especially since the prospects for a winning team seem to be good.

Other Opinions

The Daily Nebraskan assumes no responsibility for the sentiments expressed by correspondents and reserves the right to exclude any communications whose publication may for any reason seem undesirable. In all cases the editor must know the identity of the contributor.

The Tassels Reply

To the Editor:
Your editorial in yesterday's Nebraskan concerning the activity of the Tassels at the Girls' Cornhusker Luncheon was "so far from comment that there was noticeable absence upon it afterwards." It betrays by its insinuation of unworthy motives that you were obviously biased in your judgment, and the prejudice of your statements invalidated whatever value they may have had as a criticism of the organization.

I do not pretend to claim that the entertainment the Tassels provided at the Luncheon was entirely without fault; there were inconveniences in the arrangement of the Coliseum that made our task difficult. But had it gone off as planned, I think it would have been pertinent to the purpose of the organization.

I think, as you do, that there is work to be done on the campus that calls for "real Nebraska women with ability and willingness to do that which is at hand." And it is the purpose of the Tassels to do what they can for the general good of the University by promoting school spirit, creating democratic fellowship among the women of the campus, and cooperating with other organizations.

Our efforts in the past in this direction have not been, I think, entirely without success. We have ushered at basketball games, served as waitresses at the Annual Roundup Luncheon, and, at the rallies, helped develop the school spirit that you have asserted in so many editorials is necessary to bring winning football teams. This year we have turned in more subscriptions than any other organization for the Cornhusker, the Awgwan, and, Mr. Editor, your own paper. Certainly two of these things, if none of the rest, should win your approval—our fostering a finer Nebraska spirit, and our obtaining subscribers to the Daily Nebraskan.

In the light of the services we have performed for Nebraska—directly, or indirectly through your and the other publications—it would seem that the attitude you take in this editorial is rather ungraceful, and that your critical disposition has not been modified in the slightest by gratitude.

You have insinuated that the Tassels take part in activities because they like to appear in their uniforms, because they are "dressmaker's models." A more observant eye than yours would have discovered by looking about on the campus that we do not need to create an opportunity for display of stylish dresses. And a finer taste would not have implied that our uniforms were designed for any other purpose than the display of the Scarlet and Cream.

Three Years Ago

Howard Buffett '25, Omaha was made editor of the Daily Nebraskan at the midsemester appointment of the staff of the daily by the Student Publication Board.

Paul Cheyney was chosen as president of the University band.
Verne Lewellen, captain of the 1923 football team and pitcher on the baseball team for the past two years, signed a contract with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Reverend Mr. Oscar M. Voorhees, D. D., National secretary of Phi Beta Kappa, honorary scholarship fraternity was a guest of the University of Nebraska chapter.

Little stories about the Historical and Ideal

We mentioned in Instalment No. 3 that Manager Harris took over the management of the Central Cafe some eight years ago, having a partner at first but later on he bought out the partner in order to have a free hand on developing and testing his ideas of how a cafe and restaurant should be managed.

He was by no means unacquainted with the task before him, for he had had cafe and hotel experience before coming to the Central Hotel.

If Mr. Harris has a hobby—it might almost say an obsession—it is cleanliness. No Old Dutch Cleanser was ever so "an enemy of dirt as he." And his eyes are both microscopic and telescopic in detecting it.

So his first commandment in the decalogue of cafe and hotel management is: "Thou shalt not tolerate dirt at any time, anywhere."

This is the keystone of the arch, the headstone of the corner, of his success in bringing the Central Cafe to its present pre-eminent position.

SCIENCE
(Minnesota Daily)

The all-inclusive term "science" has caused perhaps more controversy than any other word in use today. The mere mention of the word suggests to the lay mind the accomplishments of the laboratory—test tubes, retorts, electrical apparatus, and the like. To some, the word conjures up images of the middle age alchemists, men who were said to have resorted to black art in their experiments, pronouncing weird incantations while over their handiwork.

A definition of science at this point is not amiss. Surely the clearest, most comprehensive one is this: Knowledge reduced to order.

The popular conception of science endows it with personality. Sunday supplement headlines with their "Science Promises Relief" or "Science Fears to Investigate Death Ray," and the anti-evolutionist's "Science can't prove anything" are equally erroneous.

To personify the word is to be guilty of the grossest ignorance. There is no element of mystery connected with science. All scientific accomplishments have resulted from research, the reasoned application of available knowledge. The logical application of principles is the essence of scientific investigation.

The alchemist of medieval times was handicapped at the very outset because he depended almost entirely upon chance discoveries to reach his goal. He knew very little; he sought to hoodwink the layman by investing his own activities in an atmosphere of mystery.

Modern investigators have taken pains to inform the public that advance in the achievement of knowledge is logical in order and that the discovery of one truth or series of truths leads to another. Even so, the fallacy of personification continues to exist in the popular mind, and the pseudo-scientist still makes it necessary to enclose the word in quotation marks at least fifty per cent of the time.
