Future Policy Of University

Training Along Cultural Lines Should be Stressed As Well As the Material Side

KEZER LOOKS AHEAD IN CLOSING ARTICLE

(Editor's Note: This concludes the series of articles Mr. Kezer has written for the Daily Nebraskan on the development, ideals, administration, and service of the University.)

(By Munro Kezer)

In this series of articles we have discussed the development of westera state universities and of the University of Nebraska in particular. We have discussed the fundamental aims and ideals of the University, the spirit of service and layalty to the state with which the University is permeated and how this spirit has been maintained.

We have examined the general organization of the University and looked at the functions of the various administrative offices whose work is necessary to keep the University going. Finally, we have dealt with several of the more important service departments of the University noting the variety of service these departments are giving the state. We have noted the extent of these srvices and tried to gain a measure of appreciation of the value of these services to the state.

Has University Reached Its Peak? It is time in this last article to turn our eyes toward the future of the University. Has the University of Nebraska practically reached its peak? Can we dismiss the problem of University education in the belief that hold many possibilities for development that we turn to a discussion of of the future.

The aim of the University has been in the upbuilding of a better state. a state better not only materially but also spiritually, if we may use sity may be a constant factor in the day. development within the state of a civilization finer in every respect.
