

SOONERS POINT FOR NEBRASKA

Oklahoma U. Must Turn Back Two Strong Conference Fives To Retain Leadership

Norman, Feb. 2 (Special)—With final examinations out of the way, the Sooner basketball squad has resumed practice for the invasion of Nebraska and Kansas Aggie teams this week-end in a series that will leave leadership in the Missouri Valley with the survivor. Nebraska plays here Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock and Kansas Aggies here Saturday night at 8 o'clock.

Oklahoma and Kansas Aggies now are perched on the top of the conference ladder, with three victories and no defeats, while Nebraska boasts of only a .500 percentage standing with two defeats and two victories. The Cornhuskers, however, are still rated as one of the strong teams of the Valley and are expected to give the Sooners a lot of trouble; and the Sooner-Kansas Aggies will be one of the outstanding games on this year's conference schedule. Both games will be broadcast over WNAD, Sooner radio station, using 254 meter wave length.

Kaggies Depend on Byers
The Kansas Aggies will center their attack around "Lefty" Byers, their flashy forward who is one of the high scorers of the conference, while Oklahoma's strength will lie in its five-man defense. Honea, one of the Sooner's leading forwards for the last three seasons, was lost by graduation at the end of the first semester, and Coach McDermott will depend more than ever on Drake to replace him.

Pinkerton and LeCrone, Sooner guards whose basket shooting turned the tide against Iowa State on January 22, are counted on for the extra points to turn back the invaders.

Student Friendship Banquet Promises To Be Interesting Worthwhile Affair

An attractive menu made up of dishes representative of various foreign countries, and a program presented by a number of the foreign students at the University of Nebraska will feature the Student Friendship Banquet to be held Friday evening from 6 to 8 o'clock at the Unitarian church. Detailed arrangements are being made by the Cosmopolitan Club with the University Christian Associations cooperating.

To further the idea of internationalism and to raise funds for the Student Friendship Fund are the prime purposes of the banquet. The Student Friendship Fund supports the work of the International Student Service World's Student Christian Federation; for special health and medical service to foreign students, friendly relations to Foreign Students in the United States and for Christian World Education.

Dorothy Thomas is in charge of the general arrangements committee, Alma Selk is arranging for the program and Dorothy Nott is in charge of the tickets.

Miss Erma Appleby, secretary of the University of Nebraska Y. W. C. A. says of the Student Friendship Banquet, "The menu and the whole program will be most interesting and very much worth while. The aim of the Cosmopolitan Club, the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A. in planning such a banquet is to awaken a sense of friendship and fellowship among students of all races and nationalities and to participate in world fellowship by supporting the Student Friendship Fund."

As there are a number of conflicting engagements on the same evening the banquet will be over promptly by 8 o'clock. Tickets which are seventy-five cents may be obtained from Mr. Hayes in the Y. M. C. A. rooms in the Temple or from Miss Appleby in Ellen Smith Hall. The ticket sale will close Thursday at 5 o'clock.

Mrs. George P. Hippe of Des Moines Enrolls in Winter Short Course Conducted by Iowa State

Ames, Iowa, Feb. 2.—Special: Mrs. George P. Hippe of Des Moines has the distinction of being the one woman enrolled in the first of the winter's farm business short courses conducted annually by Iowa State College, which opened here Monday and will continue until January 28. Every year women have enrolled in the course.

This is the third year for the farm business short courses conducted under the direction of the Agricultural Economics Department. Because of the heavy enrollment the first year a series of two courses was given last year and will be given this year. The second course will start February 7 and continue till February 18.

Course Proves Beneficial
So beneficial has the course been to one farmer in Kossuth county that his banker, noticing the decided improvement in his methods, inquired concerning the reasons for his success, called the county agent into conference and as a result a special county short course will be conducted there in March, with twenty-two farmers already signed up. Another similar farm business course will be conducted in Palo Alto county at the same time, under the direction of the college.

Sixteen are enrolled in the course. Lewis Morris of Grimes, one of the men who was honored as a master farmer by Wallace's Farmer, is the farm leader of the short course.

Hospital Has Pedigreed Patients
There are several interesting patients at the Veterinary Hospital at the Iowa State College. There are dogs that have won prizes at the various shows throughout the country. The tiniest patient is a Toy Terrier, small enough to sleep with comfort in a man's hand.

Dean Asked About Moving Cemetery

The Dean of science and literature at Stillwater, Oklahoma, recently received the inquiry, "How do you move a cemetery?" The dean did not know what to advise so the letter was returned.

Do Gentlemen Prefer Blondes?

This puzzling question could well be answered with the aid of a "dating bureau". At the University of Washington the idea of a dating bureau was suggested by some fearless youths and it is now a question of its "taking" on the campus.

Nebraska Newspaper Comments On "The Prairie Schooner"

The following interesting comment on the new literary venture, "The Prairie Schooner", at the University, appeared in the editorial column of The (Omaha) World-Herald:

"With much of the same audacity that their fathers and grandfathers displayed in the first sobusting west of the Missouri river, students and some of the professors of the University of Nebraska are sponsoring a literary quarterly magazine, 'The Prairie Schooner.' Their stake for the venture is a mean three hundred dollars, given by the university regents. With that, and the hope and enthusiasm and genuine talent of the editors and contributors, 'The Prairie Schooner' must find a place on news stands crowded with bawdy 'art' and 'confessions' journals.

"An inspiring venture, that! One that promises much for the university and for the state, in encouraging the budding literary genius that must inhabit the plains and towns and cities of Nebraska. For concerning its aims the editors announce:

"The Prairie Schooner is an outlet for literary work in the University of Nebraska and a medium for the publication of the finest writing of the prairie country."

"That is a challenge to Nebraska. A challenge to the state that boasts of Willa Cather and Dorothy Canforfield and John Neihardt and Bess Streeter Aldrich; of whom all except the last named have gotten their inspiration here, but have been forced to go elsewhere for their income. And it is a test for the editors. Can they secure material that deserves publication, that has wit and charm and interest, or will they find room only for the often dull and ponderous themes of bright young students in the English classes?

"The first number is promising. The contents betray, perhaps, the sense of heavy responsibility burdening the editorial board in the initial venture, for there is missing from the interesting pages a touch of humor that exists in rich measure in Nebraska life. Yet the contributors to the first issue reveal a flair for writing that commands respect, and promises treasures for the future.

"If Nebraska has outgrown the rough garments of its pioneer days and if life in the state has reached the cultural peak that we fondly hope and believe it has, then "The Prairie Schooner" is assured success. To those who may aspire to a place among its contributors, the words of Bess Streeter Aldrich, in the first number, should be a guiding beacon: "Make use of native material; tell simply and clearly the story of the land that is neither east nor west."
