Huskies Take Easy Workout

Other Husker track men were taking it easy Monday limbering up from the Drake Relays. Wirsig's mark of 12 feet 9 inches at Drake which tied for first there stood as the best vault mark of the day all over the country as far as could be ascertained Monday in looking over the marks in big meets the country over.

Nebraska's four mile relay team at Drake was shot to pieces through Sprague's failure to run up to form. He had apparently not gotten back into shape from his attack of appendicitis the week before. The mile and sprint teams were without the service of Wyatt whose leg was bothering him again the last part of the week.

Reading is One of Great Joys of Life Declares Doane in Speech Over Radio

"The truly educated person is one who has a broad and sympathetic outlook on life, whose mind is capable of receiving and digesting new ideas, and whose knowledge leads him only to realize how little he actually knows in the great body of learning that exists," declared Gilbert Doane, University librarian, in a radio talk given yesterday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the university studio on "The Use of a Library."

Few people realize that the library contains anything other than light fiction, he believes, and "few books that nobody reads." "By far the majority of the people of the United States never even enter a library building," stated Mr. Doane, "I have even heard university students boast that they never even entered the library building."

"There is no better way of obtaining the foundations for an education than attending a university," he said, "although there are other means, and the library is one of them. The library serves both the person who has had the advantage of university training in supplying him with books through which he can continue his study and his education; and it serves the individual who has not been able to attend a university, by giving him the books to study as well as more or less guidance in using them."

Library Tends to Continue Education "To the university man or woman the library presents the means of continuing the educative process, for the possibilities of any subject are by no means exhausted in the average classroom," the librarian explained. "The instructor cannot give the student all that a subject contains, for he has not the time, nor is the classroom the place.

To the individual who has not had the opportunity to attend college, the library means even more, for there are to be found the results of the labors of students and thinkers, generally in such a form that the mind lacking in formal training can comprehend them."

students form another under Captain Dexter, while the third is made up of Engineer and Teachers, under Captain Elkins.

Adult Education Explained

Mr. Doane explained the phrase "adult education" which has become very popular in the last two or three years. He said, "Adult education is an attempt to stimulate grown people to the use of their minds to their fullest capacity. Without books, any kind of education is impossible, so with out books adult education cannot be. Experts have been engaged by the American Library Association to write a brief outline of the various fields of knowledge, and name the best books for the general reader who wants to follow up the study of that field. These essays and lists of books are being published in what is called 'The Readings With a Purpose Series.'"

Library's Use in Recreation

The librarian thinks that there is a much better side of the library, and that is its use in recreation. "It is appalling sometimes to think of the type of books that are read for recreation, of the falsity of their contents, of the slipshod manner in which they are written, and the utter uselessness of them.

"Now do not mistake me," he said, "I'm not saying that all books read for recreation are of this nature, but all readers should learn to read those books that will broaden the reader's background and enable him to see more clearly life as a whole.

"Reading is one of the great joys of life, for through it anyone can get a million miles away from the hectoring irritations of everyday life. Let me urge you to make arrangements to get books. Learn the joy of buying books and owning them. Love your books, for they will never fail you, they are always with you, ready to play up your moods and to answer your questions.

"Don't hesitate to ask your librarian for advice. That is what a librarian is for," he concluded, "to know books and tell people about them, to show their resources to people, to estimate their value and put the right book in the hands of the right person."
