PARENT EDUCATION

Out of the mixture of races and creeds which comes to the state university, it is inevitable that some evil will result; yet the benefits from such a condition are surely worthy of commendation.

These people are the parents of the students. Many of them are misled and prejudiced against the University, no doubt, because they have been influenced by criticism which comes from those who know nothing of the mechanism of a great school, its ideals and methods.

For that purpose, a letter has been sent out to the parents of all new students. It is authoritative, having been carefully prepared by the collaboration of the Dean of Women, Amanda Heppner and the Dean of Student Affairs, T. J. Thompson.

"Students in this type of an institution enjoy a larger degree of freedom and personal responsibility than the average boy or girl has known."

Certainly such information is open and frank enough. Continuing, the letter warns, "The student's scholarship is of prime importance."

Certain sections of the letter are devoted to estimates of justifiable expenses incurred, the position of a fraternity or sorority in student life, and a short description of Lincoln.

Such a letter seems an advancement toward the solution of a problem which has always been a thorny one. If it is carefully read by all parents to whom it is sent, there is no doubt that a fairer, less critical attitude will be fostered toward the University, which after all, is marred or made by the actions of its students.

REPRESENTATIVE FRESHMEN?

In the inner sanctums of a fraternity house last night the powerful and political members of Green Goblins held a secret meeting to elect officers. The last words spoken before the meeting closed were: "This crooked political election of officers shall never be announced to the public, as it would spoil the prestige of our society. Therefore we will have a straight election (imagine that!) next Tuesday."

But the news has leaked out! And on the very day that the Student Council considers the honorary situation. What chance will this freshman organization have when it is told in bold print that one ignorant fraternity freshman, who had not been coached sufficiently, voted on the wrong side at the secret election?

Now the society is in an uproar. Its members decided they would have a non-political election next week. How can that take place when every member belongs to a group which told him how to vote before he went? It is impossible. That freshman so young in this University should get such a start, only reflects upon what will happen to them by the time they reach the upperclassman stage.

One upperclassman asked if a freshman wrote the Spectator. We wager that Mr. Spectator will not relish this insult. He is seriously ill, however, and cannot defend himself.

According to the Soap Box there are a number of students who miss this column. So when the Spectator recovers we will again ask him to contribute.

SILENCE—IS IT CONSENT?

The uselessness of several so-called honorary organizations on the campus was outlined in the editorial columns of Tuesday's Daily Nebraskan. Any attack in the past has called down the wrath of these organizations upon the head of the editor so that he was forced to flee to escape bodily injury. Now the freshman, sophomore and junior organizations maintain a deathlike silence.

We suggest the following reasons for the apparent lack of support:

- 1. The members may not read the editorial columns of The Daily Nebraskan, and thus be unaware of the attack.
2. The Organizations may have no organization to defend them.
3. They may have no arguments to present.
4. Or they may prefer to remain silent—which is justifiable. We are not asking for speeches but activities from them.

It now remains for the Student Council to call the organizations to account and to decide for or against them. The investigation, if seriously conducted, could only mean that honoraries in the future will be honoraries in more than name. One of two things will result: either some or all of them will cease to exist entirely, or the investigation will wake them up and make them a working force on the campus.

(Inasmuch as the ultimate object of these organizations seems to be to get their members into the senior honoraries, the later course may be the more worth while.)

THE SPECTATOR

I observe that upon my regular publication date, last Sunday, the Editor inserted a notice that I was ill. However, he misinterpreted my Absence. My Readers will recall that Saturday last was a glorious Day of Sun and Breezes, and so Effective were these Elements that while all others attended the football Game I took myself off for a solitary Ramble in the Country. Therefore I failed to write my Column.

But today I am truly ill, and I shall compose no Essay. My only reply to F. G., who attacked me in yesterday's Paper, is one of Consolation for his lack of understanding, and I would say to him that he need not feel lonesome, for there are many others who, like himself, are unable to understand The Spectator. I venture to say that hardly any of the Freshmen know what it is all about.

Daily Nebraskan readers are cordially invited to contribute articles to this column. This paper, however, assumes no responsibility for the sentiment expressed herein, and reserves the right to exclude any libelous or undesirable matter.

To the Editor:

I hadn't noticed any material decrease in cars around Social Sciences building, but if such is the case blessed indeed are the new parking rules.

In the winter when it is too cold to have classroom windows open, and too cold for students to linger long in the cars parked on 12th between R and Vine, the trouble is less noticeable. But in the fall! And in the spring! Then the soul of the classroom student is tried indeed!

Cranking and cutouts and motor horns are not a pleasing accompaniment to a professor's lecture. Ten years of such competition may explain many a boring class hour. Ten years of such competition may explain the flight of able professors to less noisy surroundings.

I even remember the time (about three years ago) when cranking and cutouts and motor horns sank to insignificance beside a greater annoyance. The owner of some varsity wreck imported a portable victrola and one record which was played consistently for several hours.

If parking rules can deliver us from such as this—blessed are they! M. L.

October 18, 1927.

To the Editor of the Daily Nebraskan and E. R. L. May I rise to enquire just why E. R. L. desires to have the parking space about the school abolished? That worthy person may have a very definite idea as to just where the students and faculty would park their cars if there were no parking around the school but he failed to mention it.

Between you and me and the proverbial gatepost, I think that E. R. L. has a grudge he (or she) is working off. What's the matter, E. R. L., isn't there any place for your car when you get down; or won't anybody give you a ride; or haven't you a car and you are just jealous; or have you a pet peeve at the students in general?

I might even say the world in general, for if the University would adopt this scheme to beautify the campus, maybe the city of Lincoln would do that all over town. It would be a short step then to other towns in the country, then the state, and then our country. Alas, that this should ever be! It might be a great idea, E. R. L., but what would we do with all of the cars? Just think of the decline in price, the prohibition of them, their bulk when it would come to bootlegging them. It would throw the world into a panic because of the collapse of one of the largest industries. This takes on a very serious aspect. Mr. Editor, it is quite evident that such a plan is radical in form. Therefore E. R. L. is a dangerous citizen and should be reprimanded in some way.

Let us think no more about a silly plan such as is suggested without some remedy. It is easy to kick but it's harder to remedy. Now E. R. L., either offer a plan to take the present method's place, or forever hold your peace.

Yours for more, bigger, and better parking places K. C. R. P. S.—I hope the Spectator is better. I miss him.

The Man Who Won the War

(Continued from Page 1) an unreasoning jealousy. The Kaiser, they point out, was himself the possessor of a handsome set of mustaches, but in the matter of whiskers he was a pauper.

Sousa Reveals Secret All through the war Mr. Sousa carried the secret of the whiskers in his heart, and sorrow was his portion. One night he was a guest at an officers' mess aboard a man-of-war, where the talk was all of the desperate condition of the Allied armies and of the rapid strides Germany was making. Being unable to stand the strain any longer, Mr. Sousa stood up and said:

"Gentlemen, I can end this war!" "How?" they asked.

"By shaving off my whiskers." For a moment there was complete silence. Then there were cries of

"No, no," as some of the senior officers pleaded with him not to take so rash a step. But Sousa told them all, and at last a vote was agreed upon. By the narrow margin of one vote the verdict was that the whiskers should go. That night Sousa shaved, and the war ended soon after.

DADS TO BE GUESTS OF THE UNIVERSITY

(Continued from Page 1) ing Dads' Day will be published. The issue will be sent to every Dad who has a son or daughter going to the university.

Many fraternities and sororities are planning Dads' banquets for Saturday evening. It is hoped that these Greek-letter organizations will not invite the dads to the noon meal, as that would be in competition with the traditional downtown luncheon which has been planned.

CONTESTANTS ARE ANNOUNCED BY STAFF

(Continued from Page 1) votes to be counted in the high ten. In the case of the women, the voting is very close. Students are to be chosen on merit of their interest in general university activities, in social activities; their scholastic record and their rating as a true Cornhusker with the highest of Nebraska ideals.

The representatives are to be chosen solely on their respective abilities and their service rendered to the school. There is to be no campaigning of any sort by fraternities, sororities, and other organizations or the candidates will be disqualified.

The main purpose of this contest is to have in the 1928 Cornhusker a representative student section composed of the four women and four men who are elected. The Cornhusker sales are progressing and a large number of annuals have already been sold. Students may purchase books from the solicitors on the campus or from the Cornhusker office in the basement of University Hall.

Berea, Ohio.—(IP)—"Town and Gown" have not been very congenial in this college town for some years, and the feud grew to ominous proportions this week when a gang of eight town boys attacked Anthony Pamer, 23, and his co-ed friend, Mary Otterbacher, both sophomores, this week as the two were walking in the village streets.

Pamer was stabbed, and Mary was taken to the hospital in a nervous condition following the attack, during which she helped repel the gang with kicks and screams.
