Sousa, The Incomparable
 Yesterday, nearly five thousand persons listened to John Philip Sousa's band in the University Coliseum, while fifteen high school bands from out state were accorded the supreme honor of being led by the great Sousa in a mass rendition of "The Thunderer," his own composition.
 The support of Sousa's band by the University and the community has been a final answer to the constant walling of many misled individuals who deplored the apparent faint interest today in cultural development. They argue that such development, as appealing to the spiritual in human beings, has run sadly down grade in university students.
 The attendance at both Sousa's matinee and evening performances has furnished an admirable rebuttal to such criticisms. The students have shown their love of real music; they have demonstrated that, although a student body can raise its spirit to white heat for a football game, it can also listen in appreciative silence to something that develops spiritual and cultural appreciation. So Sousa has given us the chance to show that college students have unlimited capacity for culture.

Sousa began his musical career at the age of fifteen. Two years later, he was conducting. It is not difficult to imagine that somewhere in that group of high school players that gathered to hear Sousa, and to play under the great conductor himself, there is one or a few who will distinguish themselves in the future. Fifteen is perhaps the average age of the high school boys who attended yesterday. It may be yesterday's performance that will furnish the inspiration of some members of the high school groups to achieve musical honors in years to come.

LINDBERGH CAUSES TROUBLE
 Once upon a time a small boy watched over a herd of sheep. To cause excitement he would rouse the community in the middle of the night, crying "A wolf is in the flock". On the first two alarms every member in the town ran down to where the sheep were pasturing, only to find the small boy laughing at his joke. The next midnight a similar cry rang through the night, but the people merely laughed and went back to sleep. In the morning they found half the flock dead.
 This is an old example of a moral which still applies today: Do not be a confidence destroyer.
 If The Daily Nebraskan had printed another story this morning announcing the arrival of some famous personage other than Lindbergh, would the students believe it? They probably would. If this same story was denied the next day, no reader would be confident of the truthfulness of these columns, without close inspection.
 A college publication such as this, however, cannot possibly measure up to the standards of commercial newspapers, where experience has already been the teacher. Mistakes are expected while students are learning the right and wrong of it. The man on the desk who let such a story appear in these columns has learned what is wrong, and it will not happen again. So please do not take this incident into consideration in questioning the truthfulness of startling bits of news which MAY appear in this paper in the future. Either the story will be verified or it will be marked—"This is a publicity stunt for the Corn Cobs".

 sources and eliminate the poverty among the masses, and to undermine the military leaders who came into power at the downfall of the republic," he said.
 A special piano solo was played by Dorothy Proulx, preceding Mr. Corbett's talk. Lyndall Brunback led the meeting.

 Prof. E. E. Lackey of the geography department, will address the rural section of the fourth district, Nebraska State Teachers' association, at Grand Island. His subject will be "How Our Geography Be Well Taught in the Rural School Limitations." He will also address the Omaha meeting of teachers on November 3, on "The Basic Importance of Home Geography."

THE SPECTATOR
 I have observed that in local Journalism there is but little to attract one's Attention or excite his intellect, since neither city Paper and sometimes even the Daily Nebraskan show no Sign of Life or Animation. The Accounts of Journalistic Strife and War which we hear vaguely from other points on the Globe fall for the most Part on uncomprehending Ears, for we in this City have no such laudable Enterprises set before us. Occasionally a recalcitrant Editor of the Daily Nebraskan slips into Office and rouses the Campus with his Ingenuity and Wit, but this, I regret to say, is an Occurrence of the most discouraging Rarity. Yesterday, however, there was justification for considerable Animation in Journalistic Circles. I suppose most of my Readers came upon the unprepossessing article wherein it was stated that one Charles Lindbergh would visit the Nebraska-Kansas football game between halves on Saturday. I quote: "A tea for the Kansas team members has also been planned and it is hoped that Lindbergh will arrive in time to attend the tea." Now the point is not that this is an unusual Article. We on the Campus have become accustomed to the gay Frollicking of the two so-called Pep Organizations, and therefore all of us were able to grasp at once the Fact that here was another pseudo-clever Stunt being arranged by the Corncobs. But this Fact was not so apparent to a certain Downtown Newspaper, a Journal that has the Reputation of being more or less conservative. Reading with astonishment the Announcement in the Daily Nebraskan, the estimable Editor of that Journal hurriedly copied the Story, secured a picture of the afore-mentioned Lindbergh, and sold their Papers.
 There has not been so amusing an Event in local Journalism for Years. I am at a loss, whether to condemn the Corncobs for their Hoax, or to laugh eloquently at the conservative Downtown Paper, but my inherent Tendency is inescapably in the latter Direction.
 In regard to Journalism I suppose it should be mentioned, for the benefit of those who did not attend the Cambridge Debate last Monday evening, that the Editor of this Journal leaped into Fame when one of the Englishmen quoted from his Editorial. It is not often that a mere College Editor receives such Recognition, and in this Case I think the Editor should be commended. But I am sorry he himself could not have heard his own work quoted. I saw him come in the Door two minutes after the Englishman had made the remark.
 With these numerous electrifying Events on our Campus and their attendant Excitement comes a concomitant Dearth of Poetry. It pains me deeply to say that for the first time, I am without a suitable Verse for the Incomprehensibility; therefore, to the applause of the Malcontents who neither like nor understand my Poetry, and to the sighs of tis lovers, I am forced to forego the Publishing of a Verse today.

 encore. The program was featured with selections by Mr. Howard Goulden on the xylophone, Mr. John Dolan on the cornet, six saxophonists, and an ensemble of fifes, cornets, trombones, and trumpets.
 One of the selections which was well received was that entitled "The Mingling of the Wets and the Drys." This was a composition of "Just a Little Drink," "How Dry I Am," and "Tea for Two." Several marches were played by the band, featuring, however, the Magna Charta, the march composed by Sousa to commemorate Magna Charta day, June 15.
The Program
 1—Overture, "The Flying Dutchman," Waguli.
 2—Cornet solo, "Carnival of Venice," Arban.
 Mr. John Dolan:
 3—Suite, "The Internationals," arranged by Sousa: (a) "Morning Journals," Strauss; (b) "The Lost Chord," Sullivan; (c) "Mars and Venus," Sousa.
 4—Vocal solo, Aria from "Traviata," Verdi.
 5—"Andante Cantabile" from Opus II, Tchaikowsky.
 Miss Marjorie Moody:
 6—"The Feast of Spring," Ambrose Thomas.
 7—(a) Saxophone solo, "Beautiful Colorado," DeLuca.
 Mr. Edward Heney:
 (b) Three Marches: "Magna Charta" (new), Sousa.
 (This march was written at the request of the International Magna Charta Day association, headquarters at St. Paul, Minnesota, and with the approval of Judge Elbert J. Gary. The Magna Charta association urges the observance of one day annually, in common, June 15—by the seven English speaking nations—the United States, Canada, Newfoundland, Great Britain, Australia, South Africa, and ported as have this year. If the bulk of the students leave their sittings until the last week this will necessitate a rush at the photographers.

 Members of the Cornhusker staff are urging students to report at once. Mr. Wallace, editor of the yearbook, declared last evening, that students should make it a special point to have their pictures taken at once. These panels must go to the engraver and students who do not have their pictures in by November 10 positively will not appear in the sections of the yearbook.

 cause of darkness, all houses must be lighted with some system of flood lighting. The Harry Williams Cadillac company is furnishing a La Salle car free for the judges to ride in.
 It was learned yesterday that pictures will be taken by the campus studio of all the houses. These will include both still and moving pictures. It is reported that some of these pictures will be shown at Lincoln theaters and on news reels in other cities.
Smoker is Planned
 The main event on the program for Saturday, is the smoker for alumni in the N club rooms at the coliseum, at one o'clock. The program for this get-together has not yet been completed. The innocents are urging all fraternities to bring their alumni to this gathering before going to the game.
 Many fraternities and sororities are planning banquets for their grad Saturday evening. Most of these are being held at the houses, however, several are to be staged in downtown banquet rooms.
