

Lobbying By "Al"

My Dear Sister:
I am very delighted to know that you are going to pay me a visit this week-end. I understood from your letter that you are coming alone. When I finish telling you about the shows that we have in town this week, I am sure you will be able to convince mother, that she must come along. You know how mother favors love stories. Well, the Orpheum has one of the most beautiful love stories ever enacted in human history, portrayed in the picture "When A Man Loves."

Do you remember the story that grandmother used to tell us? The story of a certain Fabien and Manon and how they loved with a love that smoldered white hot within their hearts? How this glorious love overcame all obstacles? How they were rudely snatched out of the ecstasy of that beautiful love and placed on that ship of horrors? Do you remember, sister, how breathlessly we use to sit and listen to that story again and again?

It is more impressive than ever on the screen. Pretty Dolores Costello and that genius, Barrymore, certainly do a wonderful piece of work. And the settings are simply gorgeous. You remember, it is a story of the times of Louis XV of France. The producers paid $24,000 to the French government, for the use of twenty-four original costumes of those times, obtained from the French State Museum. I imagine, Sis, that you will get as much thrill out of those costumes as you will from the love scenes. Anyhow, I know that you will enjoy the picture, for its the kind of a picture that will give a girl a thrill. And the charming Dolores, more beautiful than ever, will cause a feeling of cold fish scales running up and down the spine, of more than one boy, too.

In case you can coax Dad to come, we'll send him to the Lincoln. The stage show there is worth the price of admission. I believe I wrote and told you of the two colored tap dancers I saw in St. Louis. Well they're here this week and their feet are just as light as ever.

There's another team, a boy and a girl, that go over big. While he keeps you laughing, she kicks his head off.—I mean she tries it,—but she always kicks too high. She should never be cold when she is in the parlor all alone, for she can wrap her legs around herself.

Oh, yes three girls from Missouri and one of them is red headed. You know how partial I am to red hair,—especially when its owner can roll her eyes and dance. Her, partners sing and as a whole their little revue is quite pleasing.

The orchestra and organ play several unusually delightful selections. The feature plays Sally O'Neil in her most important film role. Miss O'Neil is a little Irish-Jewish shop girl with an ambition to become a grand opera singer. Discharged from the department store, she meets a young man of doubtful character—in fact a very crooked crook. Through his love for the girl he is regenerated and it is not until after the heroine's adventure on the stage and in society that she spurns the hand of a rich man to wed the now regenerated pickpocket. Owen Moore plays the role of the crook.

If you could get here Friday evening,—Saturday we have Ziegfeld Follies and they've been sold out for a week already,—I would have you see "The Fool" at the Liberty. You know how enthused I was about "The Fool" when I wrote you about the original production. I am proud to say that a home talent cast does the play no injustice. In fact the work of all the players must be highly commended, especially the acting of Mr. McFarlane in the leading role. He is the new leading man I was telling you about some time ago. He is certainly winning his Lincoln audiences. You'll like Miss Cooper, too. She is a very sweet and talented little actress.

"The Fool" is not a moral play, but it is a fearless, heart gripping story that just naturally makes you stop and think. It is the story of a young minister whose ideas are decidedly at variance with those of other churchmen. There is a mine strike and all that sort of thing before the plot is finally smoothed over.

We thank you Mr. Watkin, for another evening of splendid entertainment. Well Sis I'll see you Saturday morning at the depot.

Your loving brother,—AL will come through as soon as the workers do so, he explained.

Dinners similar to the one last night will be held tonight and Wednesday evening, for the purpose of checking results and issuing cards to the workers. Soliciting will be carried on throughout the three days of the campaign. Every student will be personally approached by one of the 130 workers sometime during the drive, the committee declares.

The total budget of this organization is $5,000, of which the students are asked to contribute only $1,250. Each of the 130 workers are expected to turn in about $10,000. The budget of this organization spends about $2 per student in the University of Nebraska, explained C. D. Hayes, general secretary. This is Hayes, general secretary. This is about two dollars less than the average amount spent in a school of this size. The budget is cut down by cutting down general running expenses, explained Mr. Hayes.
