

NEBRASKA'S 1927 CORNHUSKER

By JAC

Nebraska

Clair Sloan

Clair Sloan, the Verdon flash who established his name on the Cornhusker gridiron this season. Sloan played his first year on the Varsity at the halfback position. He came to the rescue in the New York game with his terrific line punning, tackling, and punting after Glenn Pressnell had been forced out of the game with an injury. Sloan will be back in the Cornhusker camp next season and football critics say he has great possibilities as a triple-threat man.

Elmer Holm

Elmer Holm was one of the best guards in the conference this season and won his second letter on the Scarlet team. Holm comes from Omaha and will be back in the camp next fall. He weighs 187 pounds and is a fighter of the true Cornhusker type. Elmer was one of the men in the Nebraska line this season that made it almost an impossibility for an opposing back to penetrate the Husker forward wall.

Ray Randels

Ray Randels playing his last year with the Cornhusker squad established a name for himself and won one of the highest distinctions given to a football player this season. Randels was invited by Coach "Andy" Kerr of Washington and Jefferson to play with the All-Star eastern eleven at San Francisco Dec. 26. Ray plays tackle and was selected on the All-Missouri Valley for that position. He graduates this year after three years with the Nebraska eleven, making his letter each season. Anthony, Kansas is the big tackle's home.

The 1927 Nebraska Cornhusker football squad that went through one of the most grueling seasons of pigskin jiggers. It is of them that the Husker school is proud for their valiant fighting. Reading from left to right, fourth row: Spencer, McLean, Oakes, Henry, Beck, Hays. Third row: Still, Voris, Westpoull, Sloan, McBride, Wittie, Drath, Rushee, Armus. Second row: Toms, Hoffman, Lewandowski, Craig, Simic, Wyratt, Jeffries, Lindell. Bottom row: Bronson, Brown, Zuver, Randels, Grow, McMullen, James, Holm, Lett.

Arnold Oehlrich

Arnold Oehlrich, another graduating backfield man who will be greatly missed next year. Oehlrich played in every game this season and is a powerhouse behind the line on defense. His greatest value to the Cornhusker team is backing up the line on defensive plays and his work was partly responsible for the great showing of the Nebraska line this year. His work on breaking up and intercepting forward passes this season accounted for many of the low scores by the opposing elevens. Arnold came to Nebraska from Columbus and takes his third football letter this year.

George Farley

George Farley is the coming fullback for next season. Farley played his first year with the Nebraska eleven and is booked for great deeds on the gridiron next fall. He made his first football letter and one of the most impressive showings on the gridiron. He weighs 175 pounds and comes to Nebraska from Sioux City, Iowa.

Bill Bronson

Bill Bronson, barked signals in the Husker backfield this season, alternating with Captain "Jug" Brown. Bronson's work in the backfield was one of the high lights of the season and he is another backfield man that leaves the Nebraska fold this year by the graduation route. He has played three years with the scarlet clad eleven and came to Nebraska from Lincoln high.

Merle Zuver

Merle Zuver played the position of center and guard all season equally well. He could be placed at the center of the line without weakening the defensive strength of the Scarlet forward wall and later in the season was moved to the guard position when injuries were heavy in the Husker camp. Zuver weighs 185 pounds and is a tower of strength in the forward wall. He will be back again next year.

Dan McMullen

Dan McMullen, the little 218-pound guard on the Husker team who played one of the greatest guard games in the conference this season. "Mac" received honorable mention on Walter Eckersall's All-Western eleven and was a tower of strength in the Husker forward wall all season. He will be back at Nebraska again next fall and is figured to go even greater than he did this season.

Lloyd Grow

Lloyd "Dasher" Grow, Husker center who has the scarlet at 185 and possesses that much Nebraska fight. Injuries kept him out of the game for some time this season but when he got back in the game he made a creditable showing. Grow will not be back back in the Husker camp next fall as he is listed among the graduating seniors in the spring.

Harold Peaker

Harold Peaker, Husker quarterback made his letter this season and played his last year with the "Big Red" team. Peaker took the helm of the Husker team in veteran manner, relieving Brown or Bronson and made a good showing all season. He comes from Kearney and weighs 160 pounds.

Clarence Raish

Clarence Raish, 220-pound guard is another senior who will be lost to Nebraska next season. Raish was the largest guard in the Husker camp and was a tower of strength in the Scarlet forward wall. He has been in the Husker fold for three years and in the New York game he played his last Nebraska collegiate football. Raish calls Grand Island his home.

Glenn Munn

Glenn Munn made his bid for a tackle position on the Husker squad this year and was another sophomore who made his first letter. Munn weighs 210 pounds and is the last of the long line of Munns. He had plenty of competition in Randels and Richards but the big tackle was always in the thick of the fight when in the game and has two more years with the Scarlet eleven.
