LINCOLN
Mary Lou Smith inherited a portable lunch wagon, a dog and lots of ambition. In the realization of one of her ambitions,—staying at a famous summer resort for two weeks and spending thirty dollars a day while there, she gets herself into more trouble than a flock of chickens in a flower garden.
Posing as a duchess to attract the attention of the hero of her dreams, she meets his father, who is a Duke and whose name is the same as the one with which she disguised her identity. That makes her the mother of the man she loves. The frightened little lunch counter girl retreats to her wagon, but "he" finds her and everybody is happy.

Colleen Moore as Mary Lou tugs at your heart strings and makes this delightful comedy-drama a pleasant evening's entertainment.

On the stage, Parker and Mack, two athletes in excellent physical condition, enjoy their recreation as much as the audience does.

Smith and Cantor with comedy songs and chatter, are two clever boys that deserve the big hand that they get.

Shreck and Co., offer a revue. Two tap dancers and a little brunette solo dancer will please you. Shreck himself is not so slouchy and the girl that sings is good,—only she doesn't sing enough.

Mr. Chenoweth plays a selection of his own composition which he calls the Barn Dance. The orchestra offers Mr. Burling's conception of "The Song is Ended." Mr. Burling is the pianist in the orchestra.

LIBERTY

The story of "Dear Me" deals with a little girl who works in a home that has been dedicated to men who have failed. She is a modern Cinderella with a sour old lady and a lot of irritable old men making life miserable for her. However she writes letters to herself and signs them "Dear Me." Thus out of a manufactured life she manages to get the romance and the sweetness that her nature craves.

The owner of the home arrives incognito. He becomes interested in the girl, especially after he hears her sing. He realizes the possibilities of her voice, takes her out into the world and gives her a chance. Just when everything appears the roiest, she almost loses all her happiness.

A delightful comedy with Miss White, the sweet little leading of the Stuphen players in the role of a wistful, romantic little soul, a part that fits her especially well.

ORPHEUM

Here is something everyone should see. Emil Jannings in "The Last Command."

Good directing and marvelous acting. After "The Way Of All Flesh" however, the story as a whole is disappointing. This, the latest vehicle of the famous star, is lacking the little touches of artistry and subtlety that made its predecessor such a powerful story. Don't misunderstand us, it's a great picture and Jannings does a beautiful piece of work. But you'll agree with us, we think, when we say that the vehicle does not give the great actor a chance to show his best wares. Maybe we expect too much of him, or maybe the story just isn't our kind.

Although the picture starts and ends in a studio at Hollywood, its setting is in Russia. Jannings as the Grand Duke Alexandra is General of the Russian army during the recent world war. Evelyn Brent in the role of one of the most dangerous revolutionists, is impressed by the great love that this general has for his country. He realizes that a revolution will bring ruin to Russia and he works tirelessly for victory and the salvation of his country. The train on which he is riding is seized by the revolutionists and the mad mob subjects him to severe physical punishment. In this scene Jannings does a wonderful piece of work. Miss Brent also, at this particular place in the film, does some of the very best work of her career. The duke escapes, but the girl is lost in a train wreck. Here the story returns to its Hollywood setting. As an extra, he is given a chance to reenact a part of his life. Here again Jannings will lift your soul with his powerful and beautiful portrayal of a man dying with the greatest desire of his life realized,—but only in a dream.

Turner at the organ presents "Among My Souvenirs," assisted by Babich and his orchestra.

RIALTO

Richard Arlen and Mary Brian in a Western Melodrama. If you like Zane Grey, help yourself. Our hero regains the title to a rich gold claim that a crooked government agent has wrested from a helpless little girl.

PLAYHOUSE

Lovers of good music should not miss the opportunity to hear "The Beggar's Opera," direct from London, on a two hundredth anniversary tour, after a run of over four years at the Lyric Theater, London, produced by Nigel Playfair, with scenery, costumes, etc., by the late Lovat-Fraser.

The Chicago Tribune referring to "The Beggar's Opera" says "Two centuries old,—a classic modern enough for any flapper." At the Playhouse Monday evening, February 6.

Two Years Ago

Approximately one hundred and thirty degrees were given students.

Volta Torrey of Aurora was elected editor of the Daily Nebraskan and Otto Skold of Lincoln was reappointed business manager.

The Huskers made a clean sweep on their Iowa tour, defeating Grinnell 39 to 18 and Drake 23 to 21.

The new Field House was dedicated. It cost over $400,000. It was planned, not with the sole aim of helping develop a winning basketball team or a wrestling team, but with the vision of providing a building where the whole student body might have ample facilities for exercise and recreation, and which might be used as a public hall for large gatherings.

Sigma Delta Chi, men's professional journalistic fraternity was awarded the cup offered by the University Night committee as a prize for the best skit submitted.

Three Years Ago

Approximately one hundred and fifteen students were graduated.

Hugh B. Cox of Lincoln was appointed editor of the Daily Nebraskan and Philip O'Hanlon of Omaha was made managing editor. Cox is now Rhodes scholar.

Delta Lambda, a local organization, was granted a charter and made the national organization Delta Sigma Lambda.

5,276 students enrolled for second semester work at the University.

Penny Collection of South Dakota Museum Shows History of Coin

Vermillion, S. D., Feb. 1.—Even the penny, the smallest coin of the realm, has an interesting past as is shown by the collection of one-cent pieces recently arranged and put on exhibition in the museum at the University of South Dakota.

The collection contains pennies made in every year since 1793. The large copper cent was used until 1856, when small bronze coins were put into circulation for seven years. In 1864, the first pennies of the size and material used today were coined. Most of the pennies carry the design of the woman's head, similar to the design of the modern dollar.

The collection also includes two-cent and half-cent pieces. The half-cent pieces are much like the pennies, the design being that of the woman with the liberty band in her hair. The half-cent pieces are larger than the pennies of today. The two-cent pieces have on one side a shield and two crossed arrows, while on the reverse appears a wreath of wheat surrounding the words "In God We Trust".
