WHERE HONOR IS DUE

The names of students who maintained 90 percent averages the first semester are being published today by The Daily Nebraskan.

The significance of such an average is rarely appreciated by either University students in general or the general public. Students are in most courses taking work that is new to them. High grades have never been the policy of the institution. To maintain a 90 percent grade means no small amount of application or inherent capacity on the part of the student or both.

Maintaining such an average for all courses in which a student is enrolled is highly significant. It means that the student is handling all phases, both those in which he is interested and those in which he is not, well above the average.

It is true that grades are not a perfect indication either of aplication or ability. Some students are able to secure better grades than they deserve. Some students have not time due to necessary outside work to make the scholastic records of which they would otherwise be capable. But grades are no more faulty in this respect than any other medium mankind possesses of estimating work.

A list of 90 percent students on the whole indicates that one has a group with greater inherent ability or greater persistency in handling scholastic assignments. It is a list which deserves recognition as an honor list as well as those who make their mark in University activities.

Students achieving honors in activities have long been honored by the glamor of publicity. It is only fitting that those who have achieved in a less spectacular but fully as significant a field should receive their meed of praise for honors won.

The list is also significant from another angle. A roll of almost one hundred fifty students who maintained an average for all their subjects on such a plane is a most convincing demonstration that all student life is not the giddy whirl in which it is generally characterized by moving pictures, romantic fiction writers, and t'e sensational public press.

We suggest that the City Council hold their next meeting in a University classroom close to R street.

WITH EYES THAT SEE NOT

"I myself have driven over the two streets a number of times at peak traffic periods and it has seemed to me that the present arrangement has met all requirements more satisfactorily than under angular parking," stated Mayor Hedge, commenting on the parking question.

The only criticism that can be made of Mayor Hedge's statement is that he omitted the phrase "of the City Council" after the word "requirements". And such a phrase is necessary in order to understand the manner in which the University parking situation is being handled by the city authorities.

For the real reason why the Council cannot establish a set of parking regulations which are satisfactory to the University is that they refuse to regard the parking situation from the University point of view.

It is no wonder that the present regulations are satisfactory to the Mayor. They are equally pleasing to the majority of truck drivers and teamsters of the city. For the present rules demand that nearly the entire width of R street be reserved for traffic at all times. City traffic has discovered that it is foolish to struggle through the downtown streets when it can move along R street at a comparatively rapid rate of speed. We admit that it is fine for the people of Lincoln. But what about the University?

The University desires regulations that will eliminate as much noise and disturbance as possible. Many of the classrooms are close to the streets and the disturbance from traffic is distracting. Safety to those walking to and from classes and convenience in parking are other things to be kept in mind when formulating university parking regulations.

We do not believe that it is unreasonable to ask Wisconsin Cardinal.

opinion, is an antiquated notion which ought to be dispelled, and the sooner the better.

Attendance at a liberal arts college ought to be and the delegates all spoke of it as taken just as seriously as attendance at a medical school the best conference they have ever or school of law, where it is a well-known fact that held. job if the student gives his studies, his social obligations and his athletic and "outside" activities the attention they deserve.

For those who point out that working students often get the best grades, we can only offer that they do so in spite of their extra work, not because of it. To say that the mere fact of working one's way through school has any favorable bearing upon one's grades is an absurd as to say that birth in a log cabin is one of the essentials of election to the presidency. If we take two students of equal mental capacity and sincerity, and force one of them to work his way through school, the other student will come out ahead every time.

Working one's way through school is at best a necessary evil. If a student puts in only a moderate amount of time at his job it may have no apparent affect either on his grades or the benefit he receives from college, but if his work reaches the point where it interferes noticeably with any phase of his true college life, he may find too late that the time spent at his job has been a liability rather than an asset to him.
