SWEARINGEN GIVES ROUND TABLE TALK

Pastor from Minnesota Speaks on 'Follow Me' at Luncheon of Religious Group

That good will towards men and uprightness of character are not enough to satisfy Christian requirements was explained by Dr. Henry C. Swearingen, pastor of the House of Hope Presbyterian church, St. Paul, Minnesota, at the Religious Round Table in the Grand hotel, Friday noon.

This was the last luncheon meeting that the Round Table group, sponsored by the University pastors, will hold until after Easter. Next week the Round Table will join in Good Friday services at the University Episcopal church.

Teachings Are Discussed

"We are told in these days to go back to the simple teachings of Jesus," stated Dr. Swearingen in his address on the topic, "Follow Me." "We're told that if we take His words and follow them that we will achieve the ends of Christianity."

"This is scarcely so," he added. "Jesus is something more than a teacher. He is a Savior first and then a Master, a King and then a Redeemer. We can't follow Jesus unless we have the realization of the sense of the reality of the personality of God and our relation to him. We can't follow Him unless we realize the necessity for prayer."

Attendance at Opera Pleases Augusta Lenska

(Catherine Elizabeth Hanson)

"Why, I never saw so many people in one evening at a concert in all my life," exclaimed Augusta Lenska, who played the part of Azucena, the wandering Biscayan gypsy in "Il Trovatore" here Thursday. She was pleased by the large attendance at the Lincoln performance.

Commenting on her part she said, "I never feel my part until I get my war-paint on. The reason I have been so successful in portraying Azucena lies in the fact that my simplicity is genuine, and my hate is sincere. When I am playing Azucena, I fairly live the part!"

Artists Are Human

"Many people do not expect artists to be human-beings," she said. "But we are very human. We are only different in our art, on the stage. Many people like to be fed on fairy tales about artists. It is the art of an artist that should appeal to people, not an artist's peculiarities."

"People fail to realize that artists are much more susceptible to grief, they have higher sensibilities, feel more deeply and are sincere in their acting," she continued. "But do not misunderstand me, please. I love people."

Sincerity Is Necessary

When asked how success in art may be achieved Miss Lenska said, "That is based on natural gifts, but the artist must be sincere. He must always be critical of himself. An artist never stops being an artist. And an artist must also be a psychologist. I mention this because there is nothing more essential than for an artist to be able to have a perfect understanding of the character he is to portray."

At the Saturday morning meeting held in the Student Activities building, at the College of Agriculture, Miss Coon said: "One of the biggest jobs the home economics teacher has is to teach the development of better ways of behaving. According to one of the more recent ideas of education, subject matter is best conceived as ways of responding and reacting. Boys and girls are now taught how to live."

Ideals May Be Developed

Ideals may be developed by helping people decide the best kind of environment and practices, by giving them responsibility for doing the marketing, buying the equipment, forming themselves into committees to assume responsibility, entertaining (Continued on Page 3.)

LIVING CELL IS TO BE SUBJECT

Dr. Shirk of Wesleyan Will Give Address Before Phi Lambda Upsilon

MEET IS OPEN TO PUBLIC

Dr. C. J. Shirk of Nebraska Wesleyan University, will discuss the living cell at an open meeting of Phi Lambda Upsilon, national honorary chemistry society, at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening in the University of Nebraska chemistry building. The public is invited.

He will discuss the chemical reactions which so far as is known go on in the living cell, about which recent chemical research has had many problems to solve.

Reactions Are Not Clear

With respect to the composition and reactions of the many chemical compounds of cellular activity, the biochemist is today well informed, and plant and animal physiologists are very familiar with the exterior factors which affect the action of plant and animal cells. But the chemical reactions which go on within the living cell is less clear.

Whether living protein is the same as the dead material in flour, beef and beans, will be one of the questions Dr. Shirk will take up. He will also discuss the perplexities arising from the fact that the chemist in his laboratory must employ the most expensive methods to produce the simplest bit of sugar from the basic elements, carbon, hydrogen, oxygen, and nitrogen.

Cell Action Is Simple

In the living cell in the weakest sort of solutions produces the most complicated sort of by-products, such as sugars, starch, and cellulose, with apparently little difficulty.

By training and early teaching experience a chemist, Dr. Shirk has since turned his attention to the field of biology, which is now his scientific profession.

The names of the newly-elected members to Phi Lambda Upsilon will be announced at the meeting Tuesday evening.

Expert in Men's Styles Says Nebraska Students Among Best Dressed

"University of Nebraska men are among the best-dressed in Missouri Conference schools and show an aptitude for new styles which most schools are slow to accept," stated Donald Barr, special university representative for Stratford Clothes yesterday afternoon. Mr. Barr has been in Lincoln the past few days talking with fraternity men and viewing style tendencies.

Donald Barr has spent some time touring Eastern and Middle-western colleges and universities, and is impressed with the new exhibition of style consciousness that is being shown by college men. This attitude is rapidly changing university men from poorly dressed individuals to well-dressed young men, according to the style expert. The sloppy "collegiate" dress is "out."
