'The Match-Makers' Is Old Play Revised Into 1928 Production

Persons wishing to tryout for principal parts in "The Match-Maker," Kosmet Klub's fall musical comedy, will meet in the Temple at 7 o'clock this evening. Fourteen parts must be filled. Seven of these are female and seven are male roles.

"The Match-Makers" is a revision of a comedy presented by Kosmet Klub in 1913. It has been revised and modernized to make it suitable for a 1928 student production. Choruses have been selected and are training under the direction of Mrs. Mervin B. Cooksey, professional dancer.

A list has been posted in the College Book store where students may sign up as applicants. They are requested to mention the most convenient time for them to try out. The list of characters appears in this article.

Opening date for presentation of "The Match-Makers" has been set for October 19. It will be given two evenings by a mixed cast of University students. The characters who will appear most in the musical comedy, and a description of each, follow:

Miss Marjorie Jones, daughter of Mrs. Byrne-Jones. Popular young lady, and incidentally the feminine juvenile lead.

William Owen Thompson carries Marjorie's photograph and has the male juvenile lead.

Peter Jones, a retired business man of some fifty years who finds little in common with the ideas of those who continually speak of art and culture.

The bell boy is a goodhearted lad who entertains the hotel guests.

Professor Is Perfecter of Light Machine

Mr. W. E. Walton, instructor in psychology, is perfecting an instrument called a chromophotometer, to measure the feeling value of colored advertising lights. He plans to make use of the new Neon signs in his experiments, testing the psychological value of the varied colors, and for testing the color preference of rats and mice.

Last year he made extensive experiments with ordinary colored bulbs and found that men and women differ greatly in their color preference. In connection with this Dr. J. P. Guilford, also associate professor of psychology, worked out the mathematical method for determining the psychological value of these colors. This method will be published in the Psychological Review for November.

FORTY WILL TOUR ON GEOLOGY FIELD TRIPS

Many Towns Will Be Visited By Students to Study Stratification

About forty men have signed up to take the geology field trips this semester. These trips start at six thirty each Saturday morning and last until dark Saturday evening. Besides full days on Saturday, there are smaller classes that go out each Monday and Friday afternoons until their eight full days, which the course requires, have been completed. Absence from any trip is made up only after the student has taken two extra trips.

Certain areas near Lincoln are visited each year where the budding geologists are able to gain much information concerning the earth's surface. Later in the semester they take trips to Weeping Water, Wynmore, Louisville, and other nearby towns that have clay rock of gravel pits available to study.

The class is divided in two groups—about thirty-three taking a beginner's course and the rest study the more complicated structures and many local geological stratifications. The course requires each student to hand in three maps: geographic topography, surface topography, and structural contour.

The boys who take these trips dress in clothes suitable for the roughest work and after the field work is reached, become hard-boiled, dyed-in-the-wool geologists. They

FIRST SHOWING OF 'THE SPIDER' WINS APPROVAL

University Players Open Run Of Week With Famous Mystery Drama

HAS ODD, UNIQUE EFFECT

Ramsey, Meier, O. J. Fee Do Good Work; Play Has Large Cast

Playing to an appreciative audience of more than two hundred, the University Players last night successfully presented "The Spider," the play by Oursler and Brentano which has thrilled thousands.

In consideration of the work that the Players have done with other stage mysteries, "The Spider" probably presents the most unique plot and entertainment. Entirely a mystery until the closing moments of the play, the suspense was at a high pitch, while Charrand, alias Ray Ramsey, business manager of the Players and dramatic instructor, was attempting to solve the mystery.

Work done in "The Spider" by Ramsey and Miss Gretchen Meier, who takes the feminine lead of the show, shows the fitness of professionalism. The gripping scenes which sent the audience into shrieks and chuckles were led by Miss Meier, Ramsey and the supporting cast.

As the play is a mystery with a plot that can not be solved until the end, nothing concerning the gist of the play will be published in compliance with requests from the Players. True dramatic ability was shown by persons who have little connection with dramatic works recently. The persons not in the University who were actively connected with the show and merited praise for their work are T. J. Larson, Roy H. Whitman, Evadna Rawlinson, John Levers, and O. J. Fee.

Through four acts, with scenery changes with each act, "The Spider" becomes more of a mystery and a consternation to the audience

HARES, HOUNDS WILL BEGIN CHASES TODAY

Etherton and Janulewicz Will Lead First of the Hound Races

INTEREST IS GROWING

At 4:30 this afternoon, Etherton and Janulewicz, acting as hares, will set out to make a difficult trail for a pack of perhaps one hundred and thirty university men. Both usually men and non-fraternity men are eligible to compete. The race will be the first of the season. In order to make it possible for the race to start at 4:30, it is announced by Coach Henry F. Schultz in charge of the race, that all competitors must be at the stadium ready to run at 4:20. Stadium gates will be open at 4:15, and the race will start at 4:30.

The student's trail will be accompanied this year. The contest will be as complicated as a rabbit's pelt.

An improved method of setting the trail has been used in the past, but this year the difficulty experienced last year in placing the contestants. This year the race will be an improvement on the race of the previous seasons.

Interest in hare and hound racing is spreading, not only in the university, but in the high schools of the state. Coach Schultz said Monday that a letter would be mailed out to state schools, setting how to conduct a hare and hound race.

CORRECTIONS ASKED FOR DIRECTORY LIST

Students Urged to Make Necessary Changes Soon as Possible

Lists will be posted on the bulletin board which faces the west entrance in Social Sciences some time today. These lists will remain on the bulletin board for two or three days.

It is essential, according to Sherman Welton, editor of the directory, that all changes be made as soon as possible. Unless this is done the Student Directory will not be accurate. Lists have been requested from fraternities and sororities giving an alphabetical list of their entire chapter including active members and pledges. This should include the year in school and home town of each member.

Presidents of all organizations in the Student Directory office in the Temple their name, address, telephone number and the organization of which they are president. Those who do not submit their names to the Student Directory will not be mentioned in the book.
