

FOOTBALL WORLD EYES CORNHUSKERS

Country Is in Suspense As Nebraska Strives to Come Out From Under Pittsburgh Slump Before Grid Special Departs

TEAM WILL WORK OUT ON CHICAGO FIELD

Army Will Be on Edge to Stop Howell and Company; Scarlet Team Lay for Cagle and the Army Passing Combinations

(By Jack Elliott)

Nebraska's mighty Cornhusker football eleven leaves Wednesday for its last all-important intersectional gridiron battle with the Army Cadets in the West Point Stadium Saturday. The Husker eleven showed its poorest form of the entire season when it was stopped by the Pitt Panthers on the mud-laden Memorial Stadium field last week. No longer a member of the undefeated and untied aristocracy in the football world, the Scarlet and Cream will attempt to come back to the role of "powerhouse" in the Army clash Saturday. All eyes of the football world will focus on the Husker game this week. Beaten but once and that by the Notre Dame Irish eleven, Coach "Biff" Jones and his Cadets will be in top shape for the Cornhuskers.

The Carleton game last Saturday afforded the Army but little opposition and sport writers in the East merely mention it as a "warm up" for the Nebraska battle this week. While the Army Mule was running up and down the field with Carleton trailing behind, Nebraska's mighty eleven was out on a water-soaked field, attempting to beat the Panther eleven by waiting for the breaks in the game. Big Six sport critics were unanimous in their opinion that the Huskers were stale against Coach Sutherland's trick aggregation and that too much time was spent last week for Army.

Huskies Whip Into Shape

But the mighty Huskers have fallen and that's history now. Preparations for the eastern game are well under way and Coach Bearg will work unceasingly throughout the three days of practice at home in an effort to drive his "powerhouse" into shape for the important game on the Hudson this week. Whipping the stale Cornhusker eleven into shape for the Cadets and to bring Nebraska into the running for national honors again will be the task of the Husker coaching staff today and tomorrow. A light workout Wednesday will be the last on the home field before the squad entrains for its long journey to the east. A stop-over at Chicago will enable the Beargmen a short workout on one of the Chicago fields as half of the long journey is completed. Captain Blue Howell, co-captain of the Cornhusker team will receive plenty of attention in the West Point game this week. Coach "Biff" Jones of the Army eleven has been directing his squad for a week on the tactics to be employed against Howell and company. If Howell can be stopped, we can stop the Huskers seems to be the by-word of all coaches this season. Coach Jones hopes to perfect a defensive attack that will render the line-smashing Howell ineffective. While the coaching staff at West Point is perfecting a combination to stop the Husker line driving attack, Carl Cagle, the Army flash is polishing up on his running attack.

Prepare for Passes

The Army red head and his cohorts, Hutchinson, Nave, and Piper are daily receiving long workouts for the coming Nebraska game. Forward passing is being stressed at the Army camp and Coach Jones expects to use plenty of the aerial game against the Nebraskans. Cagle is the outstanding backfield ace of the country and is booked to do a lot of damage against the scarlet this Saturday while Coach Bearg is figuring on Howell, Sloan and Russell to drive the Army line for extensive gains.

Army will be on edge for the Nebraska eleven and as one sports writer in the New York Evening Journal laments, the game will be in the West Point Stadium instead of Yankee Stadium in New York City where a crowd of 80,000 could be accommodated. The West Point Stadium is small and will be packed to the limit for the Husker game this week. New York City wanted this game and the few that can be accommodated, will trek over West Point way Saturday for the game.

This is the final game on the 1928 Army schedule and to make the season complete, it will be necessary for the Cadets to stop the Cornhuskers. While the Huskers must hurry back to Lincoln for the Thanksgiving game with the Kansas Aggies to complete their great schedule of the year. The Kansas Aggie game is a conference game and should the Huskers turn in a win, the first Big Six football championship is Nebraska's by a long margin.

Czechoslovaks And Cubs Have Hard Go at K.U.

"Why," asked the Daily Kansan editor distractedly, "do you spell Czechoslovakia T-c-h-e-c-o-s-l-a-v-a-q-u-e?"

"Is that wrong?" inquired the cub with interest. "I copied it from a Czechoslovakian letter head. A man from Czechoslovakia ought to know how to spell it."

"That makes it unanimous," said the editor cynically. "Even the Czechoslovakians can't spell it."

Whereupon the reporter went to his typewriter and spelled the word "Zechoslovakia." Then he spelled it "Zechoslavakia." After looking at this one hour with a despairing expression the reporter made up his mind not to write the story. He walked out of the building with a scathing glance for some imbecile who suggested the dictionary. He had looked through the dictionary.

The Kansan reporter on further investigation has found that the German and the French know nothing more about spelling Czechoslovakia than the Czechoslovakians. The freshman rhetoric students however could only be equalled in their uniqueness of

Curious New York Writer Wants to See Mammoth Men From the Tall Corn State

Hutton Webster, loyal Cornhusker backer in New York City, sent in the following clipping from the New York Evening Journal. Hutton states that the eyes of the football world are now focused on the coming battle with the Army Cadets at West Point. Sport writers and critics in New York are watching with interest the two great gridiron elevens and the battle (his Saturday will go a long way in determining the football supremacy of the east and the west. Army faces Nebraska with one lone defeat on her schedule while the mighty Cornhuskers, although tied, are going into the game an undefeated machine.

The clipping is as follows:

Tarzans of the Tall Corn

Small Son: "Pop, what's an optimist?"

Father: "A football coach who thinks his team can beat Nebraska."

Dad knows. When the mythical championship roll is called in December old Nebraska will be there. With red-fire Blue Howell and "Teb" Russell unravelling behind a line of Tall Corn Tarzans, the Huskers probably develop more sheer power and dizzy speed than any eleven in the land.

What a pity it is, then, that when these big boys from the banks of the Platte come East to hitch with the Army mule they will have to lineup to handle the punting department and how he did handle it. A sixty-five yard punt was called back, but that did not discourage the punting ace. He was set back under his own goal posts and then booted the mud-coated oval down the field for fifty-five yards more. The Husker punting department was one thing that did look good in the Pitt game. With two punters like Sloan and Rowley, Coach Bearg need not fear of being short on punters for the remainder of the season.

of the Cornhuskers, is still leading the pack for individual scoring honors and is closely followed by Clair Sloan, his running mate in the Husker backfield.

Howell failed to score any points in the Pitt clash last week, but his scoring, as well as Sloan's was not altered by the aspirants behind these two Cornhusker backs. Howell leads the individuals with a total of nine touchdowns or 54 points while his mate is standing at 42 with five touchdowns, six points from dropkicks, and two kicks about all there is to it.

old is any baby's age. But then again that's nearly the Alpha O age limit.

Just before the game was resumed, and as the teams were lining up on the carpet edge ready for the kickoff (which nearly broke up the party), somebody uncovered the idea of a toe-lancer, and the Alpha O's certainly have one. Another type of dance was suggested but these were no grass skirts to be had.

And if Coach Bearg decides to take a fourth team to West Point; don't let him forget B5088. The Alpha O's could make a great showing in any college game. (Water-polo excepted).

Moral: This will be one game where the W. A. A. won't be selling programs.

Coming back from West Point Nebraska will have little time to prepare for Coach "B" McMullan's Wildcat crew from Manhattan. The Aggie eleven has gone through a most discouraging season, winning not a game and it is evident that the new Aggie coach will throw everything he has on the field Thanksgiving day to turn his last game into a win and be the first conference team to stop the mighty Cornhusker "powerhouse."

But even at that, Nebraska could still come through with a first place tie for the Big Six championship. Missouri yet remains in the one defeat class. The only conference defeat on the Tiger slate is the Husker defeat at Lincoln. Should the Aggie crew startle the football world and sink Nebraska, a duet would be in order for the conference football championship.

Claude Rowley's punting in the Pitt game last Saturday was one of the few outstanding features of the Nebraska team. The sophomore back was sent into the Cornhusker West Point. Here's a gridiron "natural" going to waste on desert air.

New York City, already football foolish, would go for the Huskers. Broadway just dotes on champions and these guys give promise of coming as close to that mythical title as the next ones. Unless the mid-west critics are looking at the situation through rose-colored glasses, the Huskers jack about all the football guns there are.

Big Guns of West

If they have a weakness it is lack of deception. Still you don't need much deception if you can say: "Look out Bub, I'm coming through there," and then do it.

In addition to its proved power Nebraska is always a great show team. Nattily tailored in flashing scarlet and white, it catches the eye and holds it. You know those sorghum belt football teams all ways look like what the well dressed young men are wearing. They put plenty of "it" into their costuming.

Not that that proves anything as to ability. The Princeton Tigers still are wearing out the jerseys left behind by Snake Ames, Sammy White and the Poe boys, and they manage to do pretty well in the run of a season. Let's see, who licked them this year. We pause for a reply.

Getting back to Nebraska, why doesn't somebody get busy and bring 'em in here so they can get a peek at the Woolworth building and New York can get a peek at them? They'd have a lot of fun looking down on the Woolworth Building.

The Home Economics department invites everyone who is interested to come to see this exhibit which will be displayed until November 25.

The exhibit was sent to the University of Nebraska from Des Moines, where it had been exhibited from the art section of the Iowa State Teachers' College. From Nebraska, it will be sent to Illinois.

In March the Home Economics department will sponsor the exhibition of Japanese prints which is sent out by the American Federation of Arts. It is the private collection of Mr. Sho Nemoto of Tokio, for the purpose of better acquainting American art lovers with work of justly-celebrated print makers of Japan.

Gish Signs Up Two More Cage Tilts for Huskers

Two additional basketball games for the 1928-29 University of Nebraska cage schedule were announced Monday morning by Athletic Director H. D. Gish.

The Huskers cagesters will play South Dakota State of Brookings at Lincoln, Dec. 20, and will meet the University of South Dakota at Lincoln, Jan. 15.

EXPERT SAYS BUY TAGGED YULE TREES

Fort Collins, Nov. 20.—An appeal to the public to buy during the coming Yuletide only those Christmas trees which are certified as having been cut without damage to forests is made by State Forester W. J. Morrill, of the Colorado Agricultural college.

Letters are also being sent by Forester Morrill to about 100 contractors of Christmas trees in the state, offering his services without charge in the inspection of trees about for Christmas use, and asking hearty cooperation in cutting so that private forests will not be damaged.

For the benefit of the buying public and the contractor who desires to cut his trees properly, all trees that have been inspected and approved will be labeled with red and yellow colored tags.

The red tag, furnished by the United States Forest Service, will state that the tree has been cut from a national forest under forestry regulations. The yellow tag, supplied by the state forester, will inform the buyer that the tree has been cut in thinning and improving the private forest from which it was taken.

The public and contractors alike are urged to aid in preventing the forests from being overcut and devastated. Private timberland owners are also asked to see that Christmas tree cutting is done systematically.
