Neelson Jodan has written one of the most novel and captivating stories of the month in "Down in Dixie" in which he tells of the farming methods down in sunny Tennessee as seen by the dairy judging team. In the article he touches on the feeling that exists between the negro and the white man in the border south.

TELESCOPE IN STORAGE ON CAMPUS FOR YEARS

Continued From Page 1. the engineering department of the University. The work of the engineering department was very exacting. The plans for the telescope and the observatory are in the possession of Dr. Sweezy of the astronomy department. These drawings, which are made in great detail, were the work of George L. Hedger, a Nebraska graduate and assistant in the engineering department at that time.

The telescope was completed in 1909 and since then has been stored away in one of the buildings on the campus. The state legislature could never see its way to make an appropriation for an observatory. At one time it was estimated that $25,000 would be sufficient for that purpose but it would take more now, according to Dr. Sweezy.

Had the telescope been put up it would have been a great aid to the astronomy department. The present telescope in use at the University Observatory has a four inch lens while the one made at that time had a twelve inch lens. The large telescope is nine times as large in light surface admitted as the one now in use. In length it is 18 feet long.

This telescope which is now stored away is much larger than any other in Nebraska now and is not exceeded in size by any instrument in the Missouri valley institutions. The largest in the state now is at Iowa college at Grinnell. Despite the fact that the telescope was made twenty years ago it would not be obsolete today, according to Dr. Sweezy. It is not nearly as large, however, as some of the telescopes in the larger observatories.

are expected. Some from Kansas may attend, although many of the Kansas debaters heard the Australians when they appeared at Lawrence. Special attraction for high school debaters come in the fact that the question used is the same as is used by high schools in many of the western states, including Nebraska. Between 300 and 400 attended the Cambridge meet last year, although the question used was not the same as the high school one.

All six debaters are law students, the three from Australia having studied law, while the three representing Nebraska are now registered in the College of Law. All have had considerable experience.

Laws Represent Sydney

Australia will be represented by three veterans, H. G. Godsall, W. S. Sheldon, and Norman C. L. Nelson. Godsall has represented his university as editor of the law magazine, and a contributor to literary periodicals. Sheldon won the general proficiency medal in his first year of law work, another prize in law later, and a third in political science. Nelson has represented his society in various Union debates, with additional experience in speaking before audiences.

Evert M. Hunt, George E. Johnson, Jr., and David Fellman, members of the Nebraska team, are well known to the debate public. Hunt debated at Lincoln high school, was the Ivy Day orator at Nebraska last year, and held offices in various student organizations. Johnson debated during his course at Lincoln and Superior, and won the Wesleyan high school invitation contest in extemporaneous speaking. Last year he was designated as a representative Nebraska student, and besides debating against Cambridge last season, has appeared in several other contests. Fellman, while at Central high school in Omaha, was one of the championship district debate team in 1924-25, and of the state championship team a year later. He also won the state contest in extemporaneous speaking. He debated against Cambridge, and was in several other contests in Lincoln.

MILITARY BALL TICKETS ON SALE

Continued From Page 1. Those in charge of entertainment promise unusual novelty numbers throughout the entire dance. The orchestra will be in costume, garbed in accordance with the decorative theme used for the Military ball.

Presentation of the Honorary Colonel will be, according to those who know the plans, the most elaborate spectacle at such a party. The method of her introduction, as well as the Honorary Colonel's identity will remain a secret until the time at which she is scheduled to appear at the ball.

John Trout, cadet colonel of the regiment, is in charge of decorations at the Military Ball. The committee announces that $400 will be spent in decorating the Coliseum interior according to a pattern drawn up by James Pickering, student decorator. This is the largest amount of money that other Military Ball or university party. Many different features, carrying out the military theme or motive will be employed to add effectiveness to the twentieth Military Ball.

What they lack in depth they supply in breadth and catholicity of view, taking their illustrations from classic, literary, economic, and very often popular sources. They are masters at adept, quick retort and good-humored sarcasm. In a debate at Washington University, at St. Louis, last year, the Cambridge speaker refused to define the terms of the question, saying that "it is a capital offense in the English debate unions to define terms." This is rather in contrast with the American system, where the student is brought up on the doctrine that the first duty is to make every word plain.

KAPPA CHORUS IS FEATURE HEADLINER

Continued From Page 1. One of those "here and there" numbers which makes a man by out. "Believe it or not I was just waiting for a street car." Their solo entertainers are immense with the audience and typify the ideal entertainer for rush week when the buffets are being hung.

Ticket Sales Increasing

As this is no uplift movement, the costumes are moderate, and the ticket sales are still increasing. However, more than one coed in the revue will be questioned by some admiring lad, "Say when can I have that date?" When these choruses perform, blues singers and entertainers like McCleery and Carlson put their ditty on the boards, the audience will be roped in, and water will be at each aisle in case of fire.

Outside of the fact that everyone had a good time, accomplished little, missed study table, and were too sleepy to read the late issue of College Humor, the outstanding thing accomplished by the management was the placing of the entire cast on the Temple theater stage without commotion, pressure or loss of life. There are plenty of "Singing Pools" in this show who don't sing, but don't let that hold the four bits when the freshman gets your tickets this morning.

LAST RALLY PRECEDES WILDCAT GAME

Continued From Page 1. Its final game. With no game on their schedule last week they have spent extra time in preparing for the Huskers and will no doubt put up a strong fight.

Those in charge of the rally are urging every one to turn out for the final event of the season in appreciation to the great team and season Nebraska has had in 1928.

ETA CHAPTER WESLEY PLAYERS IS INITIATED

Continued From Page 1. The group in the production of the three act religious drama, "The Rock." This play was presented by the Wesley Players in seven-teen churches in eastern Nebraska cities, including Columbus, Plattsmouth, Aurora, Beatrice, Omaha, and Lincoln.

Mrs. Barr Is Director

This year, Mrs. Barr was again secured as director, and she has been in Lincoln supervising the activities of the group for the past three weeks. Under her coaching, "The Other Wise Man," Dr. Van Dyke's dramatization of his own famous book, was presented before an audience of two thousand people Sunday evening, November 18, at St. Paul's Methodist church, Lincoln. The drama was given again at First Methodist church last Sunday evening before a packed house. Monday night, another cast of Wesley Players gave "The Supreme Sacrifice," a religious play by Mrs. Barr in three scenes, at the state reformatory.

During initiation ceremonies last night a telegram of congratulations was received from Margaret Nielson, last year's president. Miss Nielson now has a position as teacher in the high school at Woodbine, Iowa.

Officers of the Nebraska chapter of Wesley Players for the present year are: Harold Woods, president; Harl Anderson, vice-president; Milo Price, treasurer; Irene Fee, secretary; Robert H. Nelson, business manager; Dudley Dobbs, stage manager, and Malinda Kehler, costumeur.

Turkey Day Is A Favorite for Husker Games

When the Nebraska team trots out onto the field Thursday against the Wildcats from Manhattan, it will not be for the first encounter between these two teams on Turkey day. In 1923 the Cornhuskers and the Kansas Aggies played on Thanksgiving day and Nebraska won if that is an omen one way or the other. Nebraska's Thanksgiving football games have all been memorable encounters. The largest crowd that has ever assembled to see a football game in the state of Nebraska or in the Missouri valley attended the last game against Notre Dame in 1925 and Nebraska then, too, had the better of the score. This game was played on Thanksgiving which helps to account for the great crowd as the Cornhuskers had not had an especially successful season.

New York Draws Big Crowd

The third largest crowd ever to assemble in Memorial Stadium came to witness Nebraska and New York university battle in a great game last year. The game was replete with thrills and the previously undefeated New Yorkers went back home with the small end of the score. Nebraska has had the habit of breaking national championship hopes on Thanksgiving day.

In 1926, the Cornhuskers journeyed out to the Pacific coast to play Washington university on Thanksgiving and lost in a heartbreaking battle. The game was featured by the great offensive of the Nebraskaans in the last quarter of the game.

The Oregon Aggies were the opponents on Thanksgiving day in 1924. Paul Schissler, a former Nebraskaan, brought his team back to be defeated at Lincoln. The year preceding that on Turkey day Nebraska had a rather easy game with the Colorado Aggies.

The first United States census was held in 1790.
