Dental College Treats Number in New Clinic Room

An average of 100 persons a day receive treatment in the new clinic of Nebraska's College of Dentistry. This estimate is made over a year's period, according to Dean G. A. Grubb of the College of Dentistry.

"Progress has been steady in the college since it moved into new quarters in Andrews hall from its old location on Tenth and F streets and is now getting used to its new environment in preparation for the inspection next fall for new rating among dental colleges," he said. The present rating is class B.

In New Location

The third floor of Andrews hall, where the College of Dentistry is located, is not a formidable looking place. On the contrary it invites the curious gaze of the visitor. There one will find the familiar dentist's chair; in fact an array of dentist's chairs, some forty-seven in number.

The place fairly sparkles with cleanliness, and the array of bright, shiny tools and gadgets which only dentists know how to use. It is here that the junior and senior "dentists" work under the guidance of the professors, who check all of their work in the clinic. Silence pervades the entire room. The instructors lecture silently and technically, illustrating and gesticulating to bring home their point. The students listen with their eyes.

"Some very interesting cases come to the clinic; as interesting as those a surgeon might encounter," said Dean Grubb. "Only the other day a boy, sixteen years of age who had been retarded in school because of tooth trouble, came in." "On examination it was found that he had only nine of his permanent teeth while it is such cases as this," he added, "that show the extension of the work of dentistry into the field of surgery. Dentistry is moving more and more in that direction," he said.

COURT DECREES THAT AMENDMENT IS VOID

Supreme Judiciary Decides Against Regent Control Of State School

The Board of Regents will not have jurisdiction over the School for the Blind or School for the Deaf, according to a decision handed down by the Supreme Court of Nebraska Friday. A constitutional amendment was voted on favorably by the electorate at the November elections to remove the blind school from the jurisdiction of the Board of Control to the Board of Regents.

The amendment was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme court on the grounds that it was not properly submitted to the people. The court found two defects in the way it was submitted.

In the first place, Frank Marsh, secretary of state, failed to comply with the law regarding publication of notices of the amendment before the election. It was on this point that the court based its decision.

Find Further Faults

Furthermore the court found that the contents of the original joint resolution adopted by the legislature submitting the proposed amendment to a vote of the people contained a serious error. The opinion pointed out that the legislature in that resolution omitted the phrase "all state charitable, reformatory and penal institutions that are now or may hereafter be established," shall be under the supervision of the state board of control. This omission, the opinion points out, would remove all jurisdiction from the state board of control over every sort of institution and place it nowhere else.

The decision came as a result of a mandamus action seeking to compel the Board of Regents to assume control of the school for the blind and the school for the deaf.

Roberto Moranzoni, Director, Turns Back on Composer's Life as Vocation

Roberto Moranzoni, who will direct the Chicago Civic Opera company's appearance in "Faust" at the University of Nebraska College Coliseum, Thursday, March 21, prefers his exacting work to a career as a composer.

When he was still a student in conductors' school, he was urged by Pietro Mascagni, composer of "Cavalleria Rusticana," to direct his talents toward the production of a new work, but Moranzoni turned his back upon the offer and plunged with even greater energy into his career as a conductor.

A Youthful Composer.

Moranzoni, who was born in Venice, made his first youthful efforts at composition and attracted much attention. He was placed in a conservatory at Pesaro and while there he came to the notice of Mascagni who pleaded with him to turn his attention to composing, as well as conducting.

"But I had gone too far into the study of the old masters," says Moranzoni in discussing his decision. "I found too much pleasure in interpreting them through the medium of a fine orchestra and a fascination in recreating on the stage an emotional fabric of ever varying shades, just as a great master would have wished it."

Mascagni continued his interest in the young Moranzoni until he was graduated from the conductor's school. The composer had recently completed "La Maschera" and had conducted two performances of it when his friend and fellow composer, Verdi, died and he was obliged to leave Rome to attend the funeral. Mascagni at once turned to Moranzoni and entrusted his work with him. Moranzoni's debut was highly successful and for many years he became increasingly in demand in cities throughout Italy, France and England.

Moranzoni's first appearance in America was on tour with the Boston-Pavlovna Opera company after which he became the first Italian conductor with the Metropolitan Opera company of New York. While filling that post he conducted the world premiere of Puccini's three operas which are known collectively as the "Tritico," after having gone to Europe to confer with the composer upon the most effective manner of interpreting them.

SELLECK CONTINUES WITH 'FAUST' PLANS

Activity Director Proceeds With Idea of Erecting Slanting Floor

CAN SEAT MORE PEOPLE

With the appearance of Chicago Civic Opera here less than two weeks away, plans are rapidly shaping for the "Faust" performance at the University of Nebraska coliseum, Thursday, March 21.

Several weeks ago the university carpenters started preliminary work on the improved plan for floor elevations which will feature the main floor seating at this season's opera performance. Instead of the three elevations of last year, the present scheme calls for a sloping raise from the fifteenth row to the back of the auditorium. This will be over three times the height of last year and will provide an improved view from each seat.

Coliseum Has Best

The opera company again will require the use of the mammoth stage in handling the operatic production. The University of Nebraska coliseum is one of the few places on their transcontinental tour where the Chicago organization can present its beautiful stage spectacle just as it is arranged for Chicago opera-goers at the Auditorium theatre.

Last year when the Chicago artists presented "Il Trovatore," John K. Selleck, business manager of university athletics and treasurer for the opera guarantors, solicited suggestions from the company regarding possible improvements for the Coliseum stage. It was informed that the coliseum presented one of the finest stage outlays.

SAINT PAUL WINS FROM HASTINGS TO CINCH TITLE

Last Year's Champions Stall During Final Minute With Small Lead

TEAMS PLAY EXTRA TIME

Record Breaking Crowd See Apostles Tie Hastings To Take Contest

(By Elmer Skew)
Tying the score by making four points in the last forty-five seconds of play, and making six points in the extra period, St. Paul won the Class A championship of the nineteenth annual high school basketball tournament, defeating Hastings 25-22 in a spectacular finish matching any for thrills.

The remainder of the final round games were dull and uninteresting by comparison, although some unusual basketball was displayed. Valley, Rockville, Dannebrog, Belgrade, Mosaic, Mascot and Gretna are the title winners in their respective classes.

Play Exciting

The St. Paul game started fast. In the first two minutes of play, Kockrow scored from far out in the court, and Shea slipped the ball through the netting from close in to give Hastings a 4-0 lead. Retaliating quickly, K. Davis tossed a basket from one side of the court, and Lynch followed his example by repeating from the other side to knot the count.

K. Davis followed in a shot for two more points to give the lead to St. Paul. Lynch scored from behind foul line and the quarter ended with St. Paul out in front 8-4. The second quarter's scoring consisted of a clean basket from the side of the court, and a free throw, both by K. Davis. The half ended with the Apostles holding an apparently safe margin of seven points.

The excitement started with the first whistle of the last half. Hoerner, Kockrow and Kresbach contributed a basket each to the cause, and brought the score up to 10-11. St. Paul, Kockrow made good on a gift toss to tie the score. A little later in the quarter Kresbach added a point with a free throw, putting Hastings in the lead as the third quarter ended.

Hoerner Begins Scoring

Hoerner opened the scoring in the last period with one handed shot from far out on the side. 14-11, Hastings. K. Davis made one out of two free throws when he was fouled by Hoerner. 14-12, Hastings. Kockrow added another basket to the Hastings total, but Martin neutralized the effect, 15-14, Hastings.

Hoepfner made a point on a free throw, and Shea scored from the edge of the court making the count 19-15 with one minute left to play. St. Paul called time out. Immediately after the resumption of play, K. Davis fouled, and Shea pressed a basket, while the best in the business of attempting a free throw, which was missed.

Lynch slipped one in from under the basket, and Martin came through with a different shot from the side of the court. The gun ending the regular playing time as the ball was being thrown up at center.

Lynch Stars for St. Paul

In the extra period, Lynch connected from back of the free throw line, and Martin contributed two baskets, while the best in the business of attempting a free throw, which was missed.

Lynch won scoring honors with five field baskets.

The Class B game between Wesleyan and Valley proved to be interesting, but in the last half developed into a runaway for Valley, with the final reckoning announced at 27-11. G. Wicklund did most of the scoring with six baskets from the field and two from the free throw line.

After playing the first quarter on fairly even terms Rockville drew away from Imperial and won the game by a final score of 19-12 in the Class C final. Bugno, Rockville center, and Belau, Imperial.
