

BLUE PRINT FEATURES STORY ON PERMIVARS

Engineering Graduate Has Article on Discovery In March Issue

NOTED MEN CONTRIBUTE

Featuring an article by G. W. Plimpton on the permivars, a new group of alloys invented by the author of the article, the March issue of the Blue Print has just been released.

Mr. Plimpton is a graduate of the College of Engineering. The subject of his article is "The Permivars, A Group of New Magneto Alloys."

These permivars have been recently invented by Mr. Plimpton. They have peculiar magnetic properties at low field intensities and he tells about these qualities in his article.

Other features of the March issue are articles by D. L. Erickson, city engineer of Lincoln; Jack Hillier, architect; W. S. Hill, instructor of applied mechanics; O. J. Ferguson, dean of the College of Engineering; and Dr. J. A. L. Waddell, internationally known engineer.

Contains Airport Story "Airport Design" is the title of a non-technical article written by D. L. Erickson. Mr. Erickson has charge of the construction of the new municipal airport and it is with the experience derived from this airport that he has written his story in the "Blue Print."

The article by Jack Hillier is on the Paris prize competition. This competition is under the control of the Society of Beaux Arts Architects, with which the architectural engineers of Nebraska have recently become affiliated.

The story of the new Lincoln Memorial bridge across the Missouri river at Blair is told by W. G. Hill, instructor in applied mechanics. "Mathematics from a Consulting Engineer's View Point," by Dr. J. A. L. Waddell is another feature. Dean O. J. Ferguson has for the March issue a discussion on "Gifts to the University."

STANLEY JONES GIVES HIS OPINION OF YOUTH

harmony and balance. Ours is a hard world, but the universe backs Christ's power and not in His control over men, but in His giving away His own life for mankind.

The tragedy of the world lies in the clash among its inhabitants. Christian worker clashes with Christian worker. A home built on the assumption that each member of the household is supreme is doomed to the divorce court. No home can be built without self-giving and self-sacrifice.

There are many ways in which clashes occur in the Christian world, according to Doctor Jones. Individuals struggle against individuals—groups quarrel with other groups—races fight with races. Again, in the last analysis, we have to conquer our own selfishness and desire for luxury.

Life Has Sacrifices. "John wanted his group of apostles to go out more devils than the other crowd. If they couldn't do this he wished that the evil spirits be left in. This struggle of truth against group was the beginning of denominationalism, as we know it today.

The next great step in the Christian world is to stop the competition between the different denominations. Where there is no cooperation, there is paralysis. The danger of the ever present fighting between races was also explained by Doctor Jones. Each nation believes itself the only nation worthy of consideration. Nobody wins in this struggle. Everybody

Library Association Publishes Helpful Book on Journalism

A guide to the best books on the newspaper for young men and women who are considering the advisability of taking up journalism as a profession, as well as for those who have already taken up newspaper work has recently been published by the American Library Association, Chicago, in its "Reading With a Purpose" series of pamphlets.

The newspaper is a social institution, and the journalist should grasp the social significance of his work, comments Dr. Bleyer. A brief history of newspapers, how they are made, opportunities and rewards of journalism, are subjects discussed in the booklet.

In the end, it drops us all into hell, as it did in the last great war.

Man Wants Comfort. "Another great modern danger is man's search for comfort. We constantly carry on a race of armaments. If our neighbors have a certain kind of gear, we must have one too. One generation garners wealth, and leaves it to the next. The family goes to seed, and loses all its influence for good—all its power and strength.

"The secret of all our impotence," he concluded, "is just this: We all have all the little greeds, the small jealousies, the selfish fears still inside us. Notwithstanding this, we try to act as Christians. Can Satan cast out Satan?"

TICKET SALE FOR 'FAUST' TONIGHT EXCEEDS $8,000

Continued From Page 1. The Coliseum will present a scene of activity which will be interesting to the point of fascination, as the stage is made into as near a replica of that of the Chicago auditorium as it is possible.

Arrangement of the orchestra seats and music racks, the planning of the lighting effects, and the arrangement of the large number of properties will keep the small army of electricians and stagehands that the company carries with it, busy.

The seats are practically all arranged, and the Coliseum is ready for a capacity crowd of music lovers from all over this state, and from many neighboring states. University students have shown a keen interest in the opera, having reserved a good share of the seats in the Coliseum. There will be 130 ushers employed to handle the seating of the crowd.

Regardless of the success of the ticket sale so far, there will still be seats to be procured at the box office of the Coliseum Thursday evening. The doors will open at 7 o'clock and the curtain will go up promptly at 8 o'clock. After the opening overture begins no one will be seated until the close of the first act. As several important arias take place during this act, those attending will not want to miss them, and it will be necessary for all to be seated before 8 o'clock.

HACKETT GETS GREAT FAVOR FROM ROYALTY

Dignitaries of Old and New World Hold 'Faust' as Favorite Opera

KINGS APPLAUD SINGER

That the royal families of Europe and high officials of all countries regard Gounod's opera "Faust" as one of their favorites, has been proved to the satisfaction of Charles Hackett, renowned tenor who will appear at the University of Nebraska Coliseum tonight with the Chicago Civic Opera company.

Hackett's survey of the tastes of royalty in opera has been a thorough one for he has sung in countless gala performances attended by dignitaries of the old and new world in all of the great theaters. Scarcely, he declares, has applause from the royal boxes been greater for any other opera than for "Faust."

Shortly after Hackett made his debut in Genoa, Italy, in 1916, he went to La Scala in Milan, from where companies were often sent to Rome to sing before the king and queen. His first appearance before them was so highly successful that soon afterward he was invited to sing at a performance attended by the entire royal family in Madrid and later he was obliged to return there for many gala performances.

King Calls on Him

During one of his engagements in San Sebastian, Spain, King Alfonso personally called upon him in his dressing room after a performance and while the singer changed his stage costume to his smart street clothes, the monarch piled him with questions about the opera, and evidenced a keen knowledge of music.

The American tenor also was called to France for a special performance at Deauville for the shah of Persia who was the guest of the government, and again for an opera presented in honor of the prince of Wales. His appearance in performances honoring presidents, chancellors, prime ministers and others have brought all European and South American officials into his long lists of admirers.

Hackett was chosen to sing opposite Dame Nellie Melba in London, when, at the request of the king and queen, a performance was arranged for her, which was designed to climax her long and brilliant career. Hackett shared the great English artist's honors, the entire British press acclaiming him a worthy successor to Joan de Reske as a co-artist with Melba.

Swartz Says No Habits for Earthworms

Habits cannot be developed in earth worms, according to Ruth Dorothy Swartz, whose article on "Modification of Behavior in Earthworms" appeared in the last issue of "The Journal of Comparative Psychology." The decision was based on experimentation carried on in Bessey hall.

Previous experiments at Columbia University and in Germany indicated that habits could be developed in these animals. Miss Swartz, however, carried out the project far more extensively than any one else, making 5,400 trials. The animals were placed in glass tubes and stimulated in an attempt to teach them to go one place and not another.

Some of them were found to modify their behavior and learned rapidly, but there were many who learned nothing. This led to the conclusion that while one can modify their behavior somewhat, it seems impossible to develop habits in earthworms as in higher animals. Miss Swartz received her master's degree at Nebraska in June, 1927, and is now doing further graduate work in the University.

Women Demand For Chapel To Be Compulsory

Students of the college for women, Western Reserve university, who did what critics of modern youth said was the impossible—asked for compulsory chapel—have had their request granted by a faculty committee.

The faculty was so stumped at first that it asked for time to consider the unusual request and a breathing spell to recover its senses. Like skeptical legislatures looking for a sleeper in a bill, the professors examined the request for possible "riders." Finding none, they granted the request.

Under the ruling granted by the faculty, chapel will be held four days each week Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, and each of the 349 girls attending the college must attend at least twice each week. The students, however, have the choice of the days they will attend.

Faculty Erases Order

Eighteen months ago the faculty erased the word "compulsory" from in front of the word "chapel" it was intended as a polite gesture that the faculty was in sympathy with and understood the ways of modern college students.

Then the attendance fell so low many students felt and voted, that it had become a disgrace to the college for women. So next week Dr. Howell Hayden will say prayers again to rows on rows of students, rather than to empty pews.

ALUMNI ADD TO LAW LOAN FUND

College Sponsors Drive for $2,000 to Be Raised in Small Amounts

Several more alumni of the College of Law have made contributions to the loan fund being created for law students. The donors will be announced later. A drive is being made to raise $2,000 in small individual subscriptions of from one to ten dollars.

C. M. Skiles of Lincoln; Judge Quentin Chase, of Stanton; and Luke Cherry, of McCook, are the committee in charge of raising the funds. A number of loan funds have been created through the chancellor's office, donated largely in amounts of $100 or over. The Law College drive is asking only for small amounts, while all the alumni are being asked to give.

HIGH SCHOOLS DEBATE CABINET GOVERNMENT

Fourteen Teams Will Meet In State Tournament During April

"The English cabinet form of government is preferable to the presidential form of the United States," is the question being debated in districts and which will be used in the state high school tournament to be held at the University April 25, 26, and 27, according to Prof. H. A. White, president of the Nebraska high school debating league.

Fourteen teams will participate in the tournament which will be held in Andrews hall, Morrill hall, Social sciences, and University hall. Three students from each of the fourteen schools winning their districts championship will compose a team. Each team will have to debate both negative and affirmative sides.

There are eighty-nine schools enrolled in the debating league this year. This is an increase over last year, and more students are debating this year, according to Professor White.

Association Offers Cup

A cup is offered by the Nebraska Bar association to any school winning the state championship twice. The championship does not necessarily have to be won two years in succession, however. Beatrice was state champion last year, and Hastings was runner-up. Hastings won the state tournament two years ago, however, so both schools will have a chance to win the cup this year.

Elimination contests are now being held in the various districts, but the winning teams will not be known until the first of April.
